Suspected Faker Of Passport Given Immunity, N. Y. Man Tells Senate Group

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee was told yesterday that the magic power of the name of Edward J. Flynn gave a client of his New York law firm momentary immunity from prosecution for use of a "fake" passport and entry to an evening's entertainment at the White House.

Sitting for the second day as the "jury" on the fitness of Flynn to exchange his role of political boss for that of diplomat in the Far Pacific, the committee heard the charge from Paul J. Kern, former president of the New York Civil Service Commission.

Sensational Hearing

The charge came at the close of a sensation-packed hearing before a standing-room-only audience in the big Senate Office Building caucus room.

These were some of the other sensations:

From William B. Herlands, New York City investigation commissioner, who was ordered by Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia to delve into the use of city-owned paving blocks and city-paid workmen to build a parking lot at the country home of the "boss:" "I am satisfied that Flynn knew the origin of the materials used on his estate."

From Samuel J. Foley, District Attorney of the Bronx: The disclosure that one of the key witnesses against Flynn, Sydney S. Baron, a Brooklyn public relations counsel, is the brother of Stanley Baron, alias Harvey Stanley, with a police record of four convictions.

From Sydney Baron, sitting unhappily as an onlooker, a typed statement quickly circulated among newspaper reporters and bearing the rejoinder: "I am not my brother's keeper."

Berle Testifies

From Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State and key witness on the question of whether Flynn, as New York City chamberlain, was guilty of wrongdoing in investing public trust funds in the State Title & Mortgage Co.: testimony that

WPB Decrees Lighter Colors To Save Dyes

A fashion trend for the duration was set by the War Production Board yesterday when it forecast lighter-colored clothes for men and women as a result of an order placing far-reaching controls over dyes and organic pigments used in clothing and other consumer products—even lipstick and nail polish.

In a move to save approximately 55 million pounds of dyes and the raw materials that go into them, the WPB ordered the sale and purchase of all organic dyestuffs and organic pigments for civilian use cut by an average of 40 per cent below 1941 figures. The sole exceptions are dyestuffs and organic pigments derived from vegetable sources, inorganic dyes and organic dyes synthetized or produced from relatively noncritical materials.

As a result, somber, dignified colors and bright hues of blue and red will disappear, to be replaced by pastels and lighter tones of all basic colors.

The effects will be felt specifically in textiles, leather, paper, printing ink, lacquer, plastics and rubber.

Consequently, shoes will be made in lighter tones, particularly in brown, blue and red. Unless organic pigments are used as substitutes, rouge, lipstick and nail polish will fade from their vivid crimson to a more life-like shade of pink.

Unaffected by the order, however, were the two most popular men's clothing colors—Navy blue and olive drab.

Jap Resistance On Papuan Front Crushed

By W. T. Yarbrough
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Saturday) Jan. 23.—Exactly six months after the Japanese began their Papuan campaign with a landing at Gona, New Guinea, Allied forces virtually ended it yesterday by shattering the last organized resistance around Sanananda point.

Seven hundred and twenty-five bodies have been counted and the counting continued.

Striking at a large concentration of ships in the harbor at Rabaul, New Britain, four-engined bomber flew through a high altitude snowstorm, then dropped as low as 150 feet to sink four vessels totaling 24,000 tons. Direct hits were scored while the planes were in the midst of strong antiaircraft fire and many searchlights.

Thus Papua became the first complete geographical unit to be won back from the Japanese. It consists of about 90,000 square miles and has a population of about 300,000, mostly dark-skinned natives.

Fuel Coupon Date Advanced To Aid Users

Ticket Number 4 Now Good on Jan. 27 Instead of Feb. 3

The OPA yesterday made coupon 4 in the oil ration books good on January 27 instead of February 3, as originally scheduled. The order applies to the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, along with 27 other Eastern and Midwestern States.

The move was made to assure householders in the area their minimum needs of fuel oil, the OPA said. In addition to making the coupons valid one week ahead of time, the agency announced that the expiration date of the coupons would be extended two weeks beyond the date originally scheduled, making them expire April 6.

Concerning the order, the OPA said:

"The advance in validity date of period four coupons is designed to enable those householders whose oil supply is running low, and who have exhausted their currently valid coupons, to refill their tanks. In addition this action will assist the oil industry in meeting delivery problems. A similar advanced use of number 3 coupons previously was authorized."

Another move to ease the fuel oil situation was the reduction of the value of each coupon in Kentucky and southern counties of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Kansas, by 10 per cent.

Problem Eased

Indications yesterday were that Washington's heating problem is easing up slightly, although the Solid Fuel Division of the Department of the Interior urged extreme care in the distribution of coal, terming the present situation "still acute."

New shipments of soft coal from the West Virginia fields are beginning to trickle in to relieve the shortage of anthracites caused by the recent Pennsylvania strike.

The Solid Fuels Division urged any dealers out of soft coal to noti-

Moscow (Saturday), Jan. 23.—The important Caucasus rail junction and air base of Salsk was captured by the advancing Russians yesterday, and Soviet troops farther north were fast encircling Voroshilovgrad, Donets industrial center, while other forces shattered the western defenses of the Germans trapped before Stalingrad.

(The Germans in their most melancholy communique of the war said of the Stalingrad area: "The German group in the Stalingrad area, which is closely encircled by the enemy and is offering tenacious resistance to strong enemy pressure, had to wage also yesterday heavy fighting against the Soviets, who are storming with far superior forces. Despite a heroic defense the defenders of Stalingrad could not prevent the enemy from breaking in from the west, which compelled the withdrawal of our own forces by several kilometers."

Nazis "Detach" Themselves

(The Berlin communique admitted a retreat in the eastern Caucasus where "German troops detached themselves from the enemy according to plan in the course of mobile fighting.")

Less than 50,000 hungry and shivering Germans remain in an inhospitable pocket of less than 200 square miles west of Stalingrad. Some 22 divisions of 220,000 men

600 Ships Sunk In Announced Toll Of Axis Subs

The Navy announced yesterday that a small Polish merchant vessel was torpedoed, shelled and sunk by an enemy submarine late in December in the Caribbean area. Survivors have been landed at New York and Miami.

The sinking raised to 600 the Associated Press total of announced United Nations and neutral ship losses since December 7, 1941.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—Thirty-two British seamen in a lifeboat sailed the shipping lanes seeking a rescue ship with a doctor for their third mate, R. I. Naylor, injured when a merchant ship was torpedoed off the South American Coast. Gangrene developed during the 60 hours they were in the lifeboat.

"We could have sailed through the surf and landed," said second officer C. C. Campbell. "But that would have meant delay and painful overland transportation for Naylor. We sailed until we sighted a big ship, signaled it with flares, and Naylor's leg is in fine shape. The doctor fixed it right up."

2 Navy Planes Missing With 25 Men Aboard

Big Transports Were Last Heard From Thursday

Two Navy transport planes, with a total of 25 officers and men aboard, are missing, the Navy Department announced last night—one overdue on a flight from Hawaii to San Francisco and the other en route from Winslow, Ariz., to San Pedro, Calif.

The former, a big, four-engine seaplane with 19 aboard, has not been heard from since early Thursday morning when radio contact was lost after it circled over San Francisco but could not land due to fog and bad weather.

The other, a twin-engined cargo transport, last reported its position at 5:40 p. m. P. W. T. Thursday, 26 minutes out of Winslow. Six crew members, mail and cargo were aboard but no passengers.

Widespread search has been under way for both craft but so far has revealed no trace of either plane. Storms have forced aerial searches to be discontinued for the time being.

Both ships and Army and Navy planes have braved the weather to search the Pacific coastal waters from Monterey Bay to Eureka and 225 miles to sea for the missing seaplane. Army planes extended the search operations over land areas up to the foothills of the Senate Again To Open Probe Of Manpower

Committee to Consider Demands for 'Ceiling' On Armed Forces

The Senate Military Affairs Committee moved yesterday to meet demands from farm and other groups for limiting the size of the Nation's eventual armed forces by reopening Monday a full-scale investigation of manpower problems to consider statutory ceilings on Army, Navy and maritime personnel. The inquiry is an outgrowth of studies begun by the committee last fall, when several bills calling for compulsory national service were first presented.

Chairman Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, said the committee intended to insist upon jurisdiction of all legislation dealing with manpower distribution and would "be in session daily in an effort to reach a decision as early as possible."

McNarney to Be Called

Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Deputy Chief of Staff, will be summoned Monday, Reynolds announced, to give figures on "how many men the Army wants."

Similarly, Reynolds said, "We are going to try to learn ultimate demands of the Navy, the Maritime Commission and the civilian agencies, including agriculture."

"It will be up to Congress to determine just how large an armed force we can feed and supply and

About 10 Days' Worth

Only 4000 Japs Now Remain On Guadalcanal, Officer Says

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Japanese forces on Guadalcanal have been reduced to less than 4000 men and a strong American offensive could wipe out enemy resistance there in 10 days, a Marine officer just returned from the island, declared yesterday.

This picture of the Solomons situation was given to reporters by Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Puller, a soft-spoken, leathery faced Virginian, who commanded a Marine battalion on Guadalcanal until January 1.

He estimated that on that date there were about 3000 organized, effective Japanese troops left on the island, plus about 2000 stragglers. Since January 1, the Navy has officially reported the killing of more than 1000 Nipponese soldiers.

Of 15,000 enemy troops that were on Guadalcanal last August or have put ashore since, about 8000 have been killed and an estimated 3000 have been captured or died of wounds or disease, Puller said.

The Marine officer—seven times wounded in the fighting on Guadalcanal—had high praise for the Army troops under Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, jr., which have largely replaced Maj. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift's Marines on the island.

Only Women Operators Quit Posts With Capital Transit

A woman's prerogative of changing her mind left the Capital Transit Co. without their two woman operators of streetcars and buses yesterday when they quit their jobs to resume the woman's ancient pastime of cooking for their husbands, it was learned yesterday.

Mrs. Whitehurst

Not discouraged, though, the transit company is still accepting applications from women for these positions and at the present time has 12 on hand.

The two women who preferred home to the life of a bus driver were Mrs. Dorothy I. Berlett, 929 Potomac Avenue Southeast, who left Washington to join her Navy husband recently transferred to New Orleans, and Mrs. Betty C. Whitehurst, 4523 Arkansas Avenue Northwest, who decided that one bus driver in the family is enough; her husband works for the Capital Transit.

Mrs. Berlett and Mrs. Whitehurst started their training with Capital Transit January 6 and, at that time, expressed the opinion that "their new job will not be difficult." During the training period, they received $3 a day.

Nazis Fire City, Flee To Tunisia

BULLETIN

London, Saturday, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Daily Telegraph reported that "early today the Cairo Radio announced that Tripoli had fallen."

By Edward D. Ball
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 22.—The last important defenses of Tripoli were reported in British hands tonight and the main remnants of Marshal Erwin Rommel's fugitive Afrika-Korps were believed to have escaped into Tunisia.

Only a few German rear guards had been left behind to engage in a bloody last-minute defense of the capital and chief city of Mussolini's African empire which now was swept by demolition explosions and fires set by the withdrawing Axis legions.

Their flight was clearly visible to Allied pilots who hovered over the burning city, and the Morocco radio said all important defenses had fallen.

The Axis Tunisian army of Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim, already playing host to the Rommel Korps, meanwhile was reported smashed

The British and French (black arrows) are reported in Tripoli (1), fall of which will give the Allies air bases from which to smash directly at Tunis (broken arrow). Shaded area represents Rommel's army, racing toward the Mareth line. Intense fighting was reported in Tunisia between Nazis and French (2) and Allied planes struck heavily at Sicily (3) back in bitter battles of considerable scale for control of a mountain highland guarding Rommel's coastal escape corridor.

The headquarters of Gen. Henri Giraud reported that the French, with British reinforcements and with Americans in the thick of the action, had repulsed the easternmost of two German thrusts in central Tunisia and "made an advance of several miles" in the valley of Oued Kebir.

The westernmost thrust, to the northwest of the Ousselt Hill, already had been reported halted.

"The enemy attack on our positions dominating the approaches to Kairouan 20 miles west of the town has completely failed," the French communique said. A previous announcement said the Germans in the eastern spearhead were equipped with 50 tanks, and that 150 Nazi tanks, many of them

Parts of Mighty 1943 Offensive Program Likely to Be Made Public Soon; Supreme War Council May Be Set Up to Carry It Out

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Great decisions bearing on the war have been reached, and an announcement of at least some of them appeared imminent yesterday.

Taken together, these decisions are aimed at winning the war in the quickest possible time. The year 1942 saw the tide turn, saw the Axis powers largely thrown on the defensive. The year 1943, it is hoped, will so weaken the Axis that the Allies can move in for the "kill" in 1944.

Foremost in the victory program that is being worked out may be a decision to set up a supreme Allied war council, one that would include Russia and China as well as the United States and Great Britain. Heretofore, the only organization approaching such a council has been the combined chiefs of staff. This has been limited to American and British strategists.

Another matter that has been up for consideration has been Germany's U-boat warfare, looked upon by many as the gravest problem confronting the Allies. The American and British governments no longer release information about all ship sinkings, so that the toll is not known. This much, however, is known: The Germans are building U-boats faster than they are being sunk, and are expected to have as many as 700 in service this spring.

Marshall May Become Generalissimo

The U-boat menace is an international rather than a national problem, and there have been suggestions that the United States and Great Britain ought to agree on one man to direct the job of solving it. Admiral Sir Percy Noble may get the post. Formerly in charge of combating U-boats around the British Isles, he is now in Washington as head of the British Admiralty delegation.

A settlement of the political controversy in French North Africa, which began with Darlan and became more intense with Peyrouton, is another problem that probably has been under consideration. This is a matter that interests all the United Nations. Consequently, the solution may turn out to be the appointment of an American to French Africa who would represent all the United Nations and act as high commissioner.

There have been reports that Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, will be made the generalissimo—the Marshal Foch—of the Allied forces. Nobody would be surprised if there was an announcement on this in the near future.

Besides the foregoing, it is likely that momentous decisions also have been reached on an invasion, or invasions, of Europe in 1943. Hitler now appears to be determined to fight a defensive war behind what he calls his "Fortress of Europe." He must know, however—and if he doesn't, his generals certainly could tell him—that there never was a fortress that couldn't be cracked.

This invasion prospect is all the more reason for bringing Russia into a supreme Allied war council. From now on, as many see it, there will be more and more need for cooperation between the United States and Great Britain on the one hand and Russia on the other.

Greater Voice May Be Granted to China

If, for example, Russia should clear the whole Black Sea area of Nazis, then an Anglo-American invasion of the Balkans would be more effective than, say, an invasion of Norway.

As for China, she has sometimes been called the stepchild of the United Nations. She had been represented here on the Pacific War Council. However, this council merely calls at the White House to hear from President Roosevelt what already has been decided. China, her friends insist, has no real voice in the grand strategy of the United Nations.

Some day, it is hoped, Allied planes will be able to take off from China and bomb Japan into a shambles. Before this day arrives, however, the fields have to be recaptured from the Japanese forces that now hold them. To recapture them, the Chinese need equipment—particularly artillery and planes.

As matters stand, there is no way of getting sizable amounts of military equipment into China, and the prospect is that there won't be any way until Burma is reconquered and the Burma Road reopened. This task the reconquest of Burma—probably is another matter that has been under consideration. A Burma offensive depends upon Allied command of the Mediterranean.

Aside from their importance in speeding the war, the announcements expected ought to provide a powerful psychological bombshell for the Axis, one that will top off the block-busters that fell on Berlin last weekend.

Both Washington and London were confident last night that closer coordination of Allied effort on land, sea and in the air will be made known, at least in part, in a series of important moves that will eventually spell doom for the Axis.

Fear Expressed For Airliner

Lima, Peru, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Pan American-Grace Air Lines announced tonight that one of their planes with 15 persons aboard, 11 passengers and four crew members, had not reported its position since 3 p. m., today when a radio message said it was over Ocona, about 400 miles from Lima.

Allied Convoy Reaches Africa

London (Saturday), Jan. 23 (AP).—A huge Allied convoy carrying reinforcements of men, guns, vehicles and other equipment for the American and British armies has arrived at a North African port, the Daily Mirror reported today.

Its correspondent, Archer Brooks, who sailed with the convoys, said "except that sailing the Atlantic in January is no pleasure cruise, the voyage was uneventful."

Miami, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—Leon Henderson, former Price Administrator, relaxed in Miami today and said he felt "very much like a football player after a hard game." He plans to leave shortly on a visit to Cuba and Mexico.

Natural Gas vs. Fuel

Krug Selection as Power Czar Portends Fuel Supply Conflict

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson yesterday designated J. A. Krug to be the Nation's power "czar" with full authority over electricity, gas, water supplies and communications amid indications that maintenance of adequate supplies of natural gas to homes and war industries will be a major problem in 1943, clashing head-on with Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes' pipeline program.

It appeared that Krug, who has been deputy director general of the War Production Board in charge of distribution, was being elevated to a position over power comparable in importance to the posts held by the food, rubber and oil "czars," to arm him for an inevitable struggle with other agencies for critical production items.

It was believed that Krug needed this extra authority to prevent power from being passed up in the struggle for materials, with resultant serious consequences to vital war production programs.

Krug, who once was manager of power for the Tennessee Valley Authority and later head of the WPB Power Division, will head a new Office of Power Director

Allied Planes Blast France and Belgium

War Sidelights

Nazi Troops Relieved by Bulgarians

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—The Algiers radio declared in a broadcast beamed to France today that Bulgarian soldiers who are not at war with Russia, had been sent to France, Belgium and Poland to relieve German troops of occupation "who are needed on the Russian front."

The broadcast from Algiers, a major allied base in French north Africa, was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Advice to Nazis

Berne, Switzerland, Jan. 22 (AP).—How memories of World War I are biting into German public opinion was indicated in the slogan coined by Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung in an issue received here today. The newspaper exhorted the German people to "do the opposite of 1918."

100 Yugoslavs Shot

London, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Nazi occupation officials recently shot 100 Yugoslav intellectuals and arrested 3000 persons at Belgrade on charges of being Masons, Reuter's News Agency reported tonight. The dispatch, which came from Cairo, quoted Yugoslav circles in that city.

were enveloped there near the start of the great concerted Russian offensive November 19. Their final liquidation will release many thousands of victorious Red troops for the drives on Rostov and Kharkov.

(A special communique announced the fall of Salsk, 100 miles southeast of Rostov, and the capture of Konstantinovskaya, which apparently is the important Don River city only 75 miles northeast of Rostov, was reported in the regular midnight war bulletin broadcast by Moscow and heard in London by the Soviet monitor.

(It is in the area of this latter city that the Germans had put up a stubborn resistance and for several weeks stopped the Russians where they had advanced closest to Rostov. The Russians have been reported within about 60 miles of Rostov in this sector on the lower Don.

(The midnight bulletin also told of the capture of Nova Aidar, 30 miles northwest of Voroshilovgrad on the railway running north to Valuiki, already in Russian hands. This important Russian gain put the Red army only 50 miles northeast of Artemovsk, big railway city on the line running south to Taganrog, on the Sea of Azov west of Rostov.

(Thus the Russians now have seized many points on the north-south railway running roughly 60 miles west of the Moscow-Rostov line, and are driving on to capture a second rail network in the Ukraine.

The speed of the Russian offensive in the Caucasus was illustrated by the capture of Novyi Yegorlik, 35 miles along the railway to Kropotkin from Voroshilovsk, whose capture was announced 24 hours before.

(The Russians said "fierce fighting is taking place at every populated place and on every advantageous line." One village, the communique said, changed hands three times in one day, the outcome finally being decided by Soviet tankmen.)

Salsk was a major goal of the Russian drive straight down into the Caucasus from Stalingrad.

Capture of the city menaced also the Germans retreating along the Baku Railway. The Russians are less than 40 miles from Armavir, most important rail junction the Germans hold south of Rostov. If the Russian column could beat the Germans to Tikhoretsk, 70 miles away, the Nazis along the railway would be sealed off for annihilation.

The Russians also announced the capture of Mikoyan-Shakhar, deep in the Caucasus mountains just north and west of Mount Elborus, highest peak in the snow-blanketed range. It was the first Soviet intimation that the Germans had advanced so far up the north slopes of Caucasus mountains that denied them the rich oil deposits beyond.

A number of villages were reported captured on the Voronezh front where the Russians—50 miles deep in the Ukraine—have captured towns 79 miles east of Kharkov and 85 miles southeast of Kursk. A smaller death trap surrounding an entire Axis division far behind the front was tightened overnight, the Russians declared.

In all their successful offensives from Leningrad to the Kuban River, the Russians reported the additional liquidation of 4300 enemy troops. About half were killed and the others captured.

Rostov itself was menaced from several directions, and Russians on the lower Don were 60 miles away. Those less than 20 miles from the Donets Basin city of Voroshilovgrad were 75 miles from Rostov and threatening to cut down to the Sea of Azov west of the city.

Of the Leningrad Battle, the Russians at midday said only that engagements south of Lake Ladoga continued in the same directions.

(On the central front southwest of Velikie Luki the Russians said they had captured nine populated places, killing 200 Germans at one point and inflicting heavy losses on the Germans in the other settlements. Velikie Luki is northwest of Moscow and about 90 miles from the Latvian frontier.)

7 Enemy Aircraft Downed in 9th Raid On Nazis in January

By Rice Yahner

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 22.—Swarms of British, American and Allied planes carried out extensive, large-scale sweeps over France and Belgium today in a follow-up to the ninth night bomber attack this month on Hitler's Ruhr.

The Air Ministry said seven German fighters were destroyed and that four Allied bombers and six fighters were lost in the daylight operations that extended from Ghent to Cherbourg.

Torpedo-carrying Australian bombers hit an enemy supply ship off Stavanger, Norway.

German planes were reported over several districts of northeast England and over a south coast town early tonight.

Targets last night were not specified, but the Air Ministry said heavy loads of explosives and incendiaries started large fires. Pilots on the Ruhr raid said German fighters and ground fire were more active than usual. Gunners reported at least two German night fighters shot down in flames. Four bombers were lost in the night raid.

The British have lost 52 bombers in night attacks this month—considerably less than 5 per cent of the craft employed.

Army, Navy Launch Plan To Buy Jointly

The Army and Navy last night announced the establishment of a system of correlated buying for the armed services designed to conserve food, oil, lumber, weapons and many strategic raw materials.

Under the program, worked out at recent conferences, the Army will purchase virtually all of the food for the men in uniform, while the Navy will handle the procurement and transportation of most of the petroleum and petroleum products needed by the armed services.

Only in the case of small isolated Army and Navy establishments in emergencies will one service buy direct the goods procured by the other through central agencies.

Under the new system, the Army will purchase soft lumber and the Navy hard lumber. Small arms are being procured by the Army, while the Navy is specializing in armor-piercing shells.

In extending the correlated buying plan to petroleum and its products, the War and Navy Departments announced that an oil pool has been established on the east coast to utilize our limited supplies to best advantage.

Operated by the Navy, it will be used for off-shore shipments for the Army, Navy, War Shipping Administration and Allied shipments. The Navy is now responsible for all tanker transportation of petroleum products for the Army and Navy.

"In overseas areas there have been established area petroleum officers who are responsible for the receipt and distribution of petroleum to all Allied services operating in the particular orbit," the statement said.

The statement added that the Navy procures all armor-piercing bombs, depth charges, torpedoes and shells of 8-inch caliber or more for the Army.

All general purpose bombs from 100 to 2000 pounds, on the other hand, most bulk explosives such as T. N. T. and smokeless powder, and all shells for small caliber artillery are procured by the Army.

The Navy manufactures tractor-tread amphibian cars for the Army, but the latter is the major source of supply for all other combat vehicles used by the Navy and Marine Corps, such as tanks, scout cars, etc.

Brig. Gen. Smith, 5 Others Have Close Call When Plane Crash-Lands in Anacostia River

FORCED LANDING—Army transport half submerged in Kingman Lake, off Benning Road, behind the Potomac Electric Power Co. plant, with a wing tip clipped off on nearby trees. Six aboard escaped injury

Two Army officers, including Brig. Gen. Luther S. Smith of 3817 Cathedral Avenue, and four enlisted men escaped injury yesterday when their twin-motored plane made a crash landing in the Eastern Branch of the Anacostia River near the Benning Power Plant.

General Smith was piloting the craft which had just left Bolling Field when both motors "froze," over the power house. In a long glide toward the water, the ship missed high tension lines by inches, tore through 100 feet of trees lining the river bank and then pancaked into the water about 20 feet off shore.

The undercarriage struck bottom, allowing the crew to scramble to safety atop the plane. They were straddling the fuselage when Robert Watts, 1736 L Street Northeast, a Potomac Electric Power Co. workman, rowed to their aid. He carried all of the men to shore with their parachutes and other equipment.

General Smith, when his feet touched the shore, was heard to remark: "Well, that's the second one I've walked away from in 18 years."

of the most modern, were in action in the whole area.

Dispatches from Cairo said Allied pilots in flying over Tripoli, the last port in Libya, saw the city covered by clouds of smoke rising from demolition fires and explosions which a small rearguard of German engineers evidently had set to destroy every military installation before the British arrived.

The exact location of the British was not disclosed in these dispatches, but the Morocco radio reported that "all important defense posts of Tripoli have been occupied by the British Eighth Army." One British wing was believed sweeping to the southwest in efforts to cut off the retreat of enemy forces remaining in the city.

The Cairo dispatches said the Italians in Rommel's army had been sent ahead into Tunisia, where they had gone 50 miles beyond the border.

Il Duce's Empire Toppled

To the south, in the Libyan Sahara, the French communique reported, the last garrisons of Mussolini's empire, were being rounded up.

The destruction yesterday, in the earlier phases of this continuing Tunisian action, of 10 enemy planes and some 65 Axis motor vehicles was disclosed by officers of the Allied command.

Rommel's army was under the unending assult of both British and American bombers and fighter planes—the ring of Allied air bases from Tunisia on the west, Libya on the east and Malta in the Mediterranean was coming into heavy use in the developing battle for North Africa.

Planes Smash at Enemy

Official reports told of air attacks on Rommel's fugitives 25 miles deep into Tunisia as early as yesterday; of a continuing offensive patrol over the Mediterranean between Tunisia and the Axis base of Sicily in which an Axis freighter was sunk in those narrow waters and a tanker damaged; of unending assaults upon Tripoli itself, of sweeps over both the Tunisian and Tripolitanian battle areas; of attacks on enemy transport from the Tripolitan frontier to Gabes in Tunisia in which many vehicles were destroyed.

The British fleet went on with its cooperative sweeps in the Mediterranean. An Admiralty announcement disclosed light naval forces thrusting into Tripoli Harbor had sunk an Italian submarine and had bombarded the harbor works without suffering any damage of consequence.

The Axis ground resistance about Tripoli itself appeared in all accounts to be mainly a holding action; it was plain that Rommel was making the most desperate efforts to get out all possible supplies.

The R. A. F. caught the Italians blowing up the city's Castel Benito Airdrome and this was halted with a brisk strafing assault.

U. S. Planes Punish Axis Over Wide Area

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Jan. 22.—United States Fighter and Bomber Squadrons yesterday carried out the most widespread and effective operations in recent days, spokesmen reported today, machinegunning and bombing German columns, attacking shipping, engaging Nazi planes in the air, and punishing large motor convoys on the coastal road along which Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's battered Afrika Korps seeks to withdraw from Tripolitania.

American planes destroyed 10 Axis airships, and "well over" 65 enemy motor vehicles in their sweeps, losing only three aircraft themselves.

At Pont Du Fahs, B-25s escorted by P-38s blasted away the main portion of the road north of that town which is vital to the Germans in reinforcing their forces to the southwest. Other bombs hit a nearby railroad bridge.

B-26 bombers accompanied by P-38s sank one medium-sized freighter and strafed another between Tunisia and Sicily, shot down two tri-motored Italian bombers and downed three out of a group of Messerschmitt 109s which jumped them.

One sweep by heavily gunned Lightning fighters destroyed about 65 Axis motor vehicles about 15 miles west of Ben Garane, and P-38s shot up about 20 trucks along the road between Gabes and Ben Gardane. The American planes came in so low on this attack that one hit a telephone pole, but flew home safely despite a damaged wing.

A-20 bombers joined by P-40 fighters and American manned Spitfires strafed German tanks and trucks east of Ousseltia, leaving three fires burning in the target area.

'Can't Stop Us'—Montgomery

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Jan. 19 (Delayed).—The British Eighth Army's final drive to clean up Tripolitania began at dawn January 15 with Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's war cry: "On to Tripoli!"

His order of the day was read to the troops huddled together in small groups just before they attacked. It said:

"Leading units of the Eighth Army are now only about 200 miles from Tripoli. The Eighth Army is going to Tripoli.

"Tripoli is the only town in the Italian overseas empire still remaining in their possession. Therefore we will take it from them; they will then have no empire.

"If each one of us, whether frontline soldier or officer, or man whose duty is performed in some other sphere, puts his whole heart and soul into this next contest, then nothnig can stop us. Nothing has stopped us since the Battle of Egypt began October 23. Nothing will stop us now.

"Some must be back to begin with, but we will all be in the hunt eventually.

"On to Tripoli!

"Our families and friends in the home country will be proud when they have heard we have captured this place."

of thinly scattered Japanese troops wandering through dense jungle. The majority of the Japs killed in yesterday's push were in a pocket about 2500 yards from the beach on the water-soaked Sanananda Road.

Considerable equipment was captured, including field guns, trucks and ammunition.

The Allied triumph announced today as the climax of a series of maneuvers which rolled the Japs back over the mountains and caused them to surrender, in turn, Gona, and then Buna, from which their drive across the mountains began last July.

"In a predawn attack our bombers struck heavily at shipping in the harbor," the communique said of the new raid.

"In an extremely low level strike, four ships of an aggregate tonnage of 24,000 tons were destroyed. Direct hits on a 4000-ton cargo ship split and sank the vessel within four minutes. An 8000-ton transport was left burning as a result of two direct hits and later was seen to explode.

"A 4000-ton vessel with a lighter moored alongside was hit and sank within 12 minutes, while another 8000-ton vessel received three direct hits and was left burning with a series of explosions. Two searchlights were extinguished by strafing. All our planes returned safely."

Globe-Wide Net Of Mobile Ship Docks Visioned

By the Associated Press

A globe-girdling network of mobile drydocks for repairing United Nations' vessels and possibly converting some from one type to another is planned by the Navy.

It asked Congress yesterday for 210 million dollars to finance the project and a bill appropriating that sum was introduced by Representative Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia acting for the House Naval Committee.

Undersecretary Forrestal of the Navy explained in a letter to Speaker Rayburn that "there is a pressing need for vastly increased ship drydocking facilities all over the world." He said the drydock shortage "indicates the necessity for the construction of highly mobile floating docks which can follow the fleets or accompany them."

Besides, he added, the British admiralty has made "urgent requests for this country to provide it with docking facilities in the active theaters of war."

"Mobile floating docks are considered the most desirable to meet our current and prospective needs," he declared.

The Navy recommended construction of at least five floating drydocks for vessels the size of cruisers, 18 for destroyer tonnage and 25 for patrol craft. Cost was estimated at 133 million dollars. Details of the plans for using the additional 77 million dollars were withheld.

Spies Operate In Argentina, U. S. Charges

By the Associated Press

Montevideo, Uruguay, Jan. 22. The Inter-American Committee for Political Defense published today a memorandum submitted by the United States, charging that a vast spy ring was operating in Argentina, financed by the German Embassy.

The ring was said to work under instructions from the German high command.

The memorandum mentions at least 30 members of four district groups or "cells" whose operations were supposed to affect 10 American countries.

Among them were not only Capt. Dietrich Niebuhr, whom Berlin has withdrawn from his post as naval and air attache, at Argentina's request, but also Gen. Gunther Niedenfuhr, until recently military attache at the German Embassy.

Niebuhr, for whom safe conducts have been granted by the governments of Brazil, the United States and Britain, will sail from Buenos Aires January 27, aboard the Spanish liner Cabo de Hornos.

The memorandum was published two days after Chile broke off relations with the Axis. A similar United States memorandum presented last November disclosed extent of belligerent activities in Chile under cover of that country's neutrality.

Tripoli, Prize of Conquerors, Boasts Charm, Old and New

Tripoli, capital and chief port of Tripolitania, pounded relentlessly by the Allies, probably had its beginning as a trading post of Phoenicians of Sidon long before the Christian era, says the National Georgraphic Society.

The city normally has a mixed population of about 100,000, with more than a third Italians. The Italians fortified the port, dredged the harbor, and cleared space for public gardens. They erected modern hotels, a hospital, and an artillery factory. They also added port quays, airways, railways and highways. Long moles extend into the Mediterranean.

Built on terraces extending down to the harbor, most of the city's low whitewashed buildings have flat roofs. Moslem minarets, and synagogues rise above the low level of house tops. A sea wall bordering the bay, forms a promenade.

The main street is broad and straight. Camels and motor cars use it with equal right.

The old castle beyond the bayshore drive has figured in Tripolitan history since the Turks took the city from the Knights of Malta in 1551. It has been used by the Italians for government offices.

A road passable by trucks runs from Tripoli south to Lake Chad in central Africa. Other roads connect with road systems south of the Sahara by trails that for centuries have been used by camel caravans and Arab traders.

In its long history, the city has been held in turn by Carthaginians, Numidians, Romans, Vandals, Byzantines, Arabs, Berbers, Normans, Spaniards and Turks. For enturies the city was a hangout of Barbary pirates.

The town of Medenine, Rommel's reported Tunisian haven after abondoning his Libian army, had been a troglodyte village for centuries. Its hundreds of vaulted dwellings are built of stone and native cement. They stand in rows, piled one on another, some five stories high. These whitewashed "apartments" each have one room, without windows and only one entrance. Wood is used only for the doors, usually two feet wide and twice as high. Foot-long keys throw the locks. Along the inner walls benches of cement or stone serve as beds and chairs. Upper rooms are reached by stone steps projecting from the outside of the walls. The men spend most of the yea away from home, following their herds.

D. C. Resident Among Dead On Navy List

One Washington man was reported dead by the Navy Department yesterday in releasing a list of 95 additional casualties in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. Reported to next of kin were 18 dead, 37 wounded and 40 missing.

The local casualty is Otho Harrison Earp, jr., second class seaman, 32, whose wife, Marguerite S. Earp, resides at 1716 Fort Davis Street Southeast.

Seaman Earp, a native of Cincinnati, came to Washington as a young boy and attended local schools, including Eastern High School. Until his enlistment last June, he was employed as a meat cutter for the Sanitary Grocery Stores and other local stores for several years.

He trained at Newport, R. I., and then was assigned to sea duty. Seaman Earp had been home several times since his enlistment. His wife last saw him during a short furlough last month. Mrs. Earp told The Post yesterday that her husband "couldn't wait to get into service and was very proud to be in the Navy."

In addition to his wife, his mother, Mrs. Lula Mattox, also of Washington, survives.

Included in the list was James Wendell Sterling, a watertender from Norfolk, Va. He is reported missing. His next of kin is a wife, Mrs. Odell L. Sterling.

The list released yesterday brings total Navy casualties since Pearl Harbor to 21,629. Of these 6386 are dead, 3900 wounded and 11,343 missing.

Senate Probe Of Manpower ToBeReopened

whether ceilings should be written into the law," the chairman declared. He noted that rumors of ultimate Army demands ran as high as 12 million.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, proposed Thursday that the United States concentrate on producing food and weapons, leaving to its Allies the furnishing of additional fighting men. He offered a resolution calling upon Congress "to reappraise the entire manpower problem" with a view of fixing the maximum number of men to be inducted and asked its reference to the Appropriations Committee, which approves funds for payment of the armed forces.

Seek Future Jurisdiction

"We are going to ask Vice President Wallace to refer Senator Bankhead's resolution to the Military Affairs Committee," Reynolds said, "and seek jurisdiction over any future manpower proposals. Legislation now under consideration by the labor and other committees we'll ask be re-referred to our committee by the Senate after the other committees have reported."

Marine Officer Denies Tale of Labor Trouble

A published story that marines at Guadalcanal had to unload their own supplies because a merchant ship crew contended Sunday work would violate union rules brought from a Marine officer yesterday a statement that "they've had no difficulties of this nature in the Solomons."

The Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal in a copyrighted story, quoted six veterans of the Guadalcanal action, on individual visits to Akron, as saying the crew refused to unload a merchant ship because of National Maritime Union rules against working on Sunday. The crew had worked two hours on a Saturday and then laid off until Monday, the veterans said.

At Washington, Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Puller of the Marines, who left the Solomons early this month, told a press conference:

"All the ships are unloaded as a matter of routine by the soldiers, sailors or marines. Even those brought in by merchant seamen—of which there are a very few, because most of the ships are transports—are unloaded by soldiers, sailors or marines."

Joseph Curran, president of the C. I. O. National Maritime Union, told reporters at New York that there were no union rules which prevented seamen for unloading a ship on Sunday, that seamen have always worked on Sunday and that ships' articles definitely provide for work "at the discretion of the master."

"If there was any semblance of truth in this story, we would have heard about it many months ago from marine officials, from the Maritime Commission and from other Government sources," Curran said.

The Rangers Learn How to Take a Village

PERILOUS PRELUDE TO THE REAL THING—With high explosive set off perilously close to them, U. S. Rangers at Camp Forrest, Tenn., rehearse for house-to-house fighting that may come later in Nazi-held Europe. Blasts were set off so close by that some of the Rangers were showered with the debris—just to get them used to it he said, adding:

"They are as good troops as you can get."

Puller said he believed the Japs left on Guadalcanal "have enough of it." Unless they get reinforcements, he said, they are through as an effective fighting force.

Declaring that there should be no trouble cleaning out the rest of the Japs, he stated:

"Of course, I can't say what the plans of the commanding general there now are, but I believe that in a ten-day operation using the available men there, we could clean out the Japs. All but stragglers."

Henderson Field on Guadalcanal, Colonel Puller revealed, has been expanded by the building of additional landing strips spread over a great area. He declared it was now a "No. 1 air base, able to handle practically anything."

Big Army Flying Fortresses, which earlier in the Solomons campaign had to operate from more remote South Pacific islands, now base on Guadalcanal, he said.

The Japs on the island have no tanks and only a few short-barreled 77-millimeter field pieces left, the Marine officer stated. "Pistol Pete"—a long range gun which formerly used to shell the American base, usually at mealtimes—no longer is operating.

"I believe it was a long-range naval gun the Japs brought ashore and can no longer shoot because they have used up all their ammunition," he said. "Or maybe our airmen got it. They tried to figure out its position and went after it many times."

Now Better Prepared

Puller said the American base was immeasurably better prepared to repel attack now than a few months ago. There are more planes, bunkers to protect them, antiaircraft guns and more artillery. At one time, he said, the base's shore guns couldn't outrange enemy destroyers, much less the bigger Jap warships which bombarded them.

American antiaircraft fire now forces the few Nipponese planes which attempt to bomb them to such heights that the bombs normally fall 10 miles away, Puller declared.

As far as is known, the Japs never had more than nine tanks on Guadalcanal and the Marines "took these away from them," the officer stated.

When he left, Puller said, there were no Japanese east or south of the American base. Our lines to the west of Henderson Field are about 4 miles west of Point Cruz running south from the beach, he declared.

This would put them about 11 miles west of Henderson Field and about the same distance from Cape Esperance, near the northwest tip of the island.

Colonel Puller, a native of West Point, Va., has been in the Marines since the last war when he enlisted as a private. A recent story from Guadalcanal, written by a Marine combat correspondent, said he was called "the perfect soldier" by many there. He once refused to be evacuated, though badly wounded.

No Reinforcements for Japs

The Marine officer said the Japanese had not landed any reinforcements on Guadalcanal since early November, when 1500 men were put ashore east of Henderson Field. About half of these were killed and the remainder driven back into the hills.

If any enemy troops were landed during the huge enemy assault on the island in mid-November, he added, they were a liability rather than an asset, "as they didn't even get rifles ashore from the Jap transports destroyed on the beach at Guadalcanal."

The reason for the lull in fighting ashore following the mid-November battle up until the American attacks this month, Colonel Puller said, was that the Japs were not in position to attack, and the process of relieving the Marines by the Army was under way. All of the Marines are to be withdrawn, he said.

Asked about the Jap base on Munda, in the middle Solomons, Puller said it was not strong and that while he was there the American pilots used to "almost put their wheels on the ground" when bombing it.

Earlier in the day, the Navy reported on current operations in the South Pacific, saying American troops "continued mopping up pockets of enemy resistance" and made small advances on January 21.

Text of the communique, No. 258, follows:

"South Pacific: (All dates are East Longitude.)

"1. During the night of January 20-21 United States aircraft carried out several harassing attacks on enemy installations on Ballale Island off the northeast coast of Shortland Island. Results were not observed.

"On January 21:

"(a) A Japanese plane dropped several bombs on Espiritu Santo Island in the New Hebrides group. There were no casualties to personnel and our installations were not damaged.

"(b) During the night of January 21-22 single enemy planes dropped bombs in the vicinity of the airfield at Guadalcanal. Minor damage to installations has been reported and three men were killed and one wounded. Antiaircraft fire shot down one enemy plane.

"3. United States ground forces on Guadalcanal continued mopping up pockets of enemy resistance and made small advances in some sectors."

Art of Head Bashing Tops Ranger Studies

By Norman Bradley
Associated Press Staff Writer

Camp Forrest, Tenn., Jan. 22.—The not so gentle art of murder and mayhem as preached and practiced in the Second Army Ranger School here would make any American glad the students are on our side.

"A gentleman in battle is a dead man," explained Lieut. William E. Vazzana of Monongahela, Pa., who teaches his charges how to disarm an enemy holding a bayonetted rifle, smash his instep, break his elbow and cut his throat or crush his skull with his own rifle, all in one swift continuous motion.

"You've got to learn to kill a man with your bare hands," said the young officer whose pleasant smile belied the intentness with which he advocated crippling blows beneath the belt.

Lieutenant Vazzana's course in hand-to-hand combat is only one of the 15 the 600 picked men have studied for the past two weeks, most of them under simulated battle conditions which approach the real thing.

For instance, as the Rangers skitter across a three-strand rope bridge—one strand on which to walk, the others to hold—heavy charges of dynamite churn and geyser the water less than two feet below the sagging rope. Other charges rock the stream banks, shake the trees to which the bridge is anchored. Nearby, automatic rifles and machine guns chatter, just to lend realism to the scene.

Over at the Rangers' reconstructed Nazi village, the students dodge from door to door while their buddies, covering their advance, pepper the shacks and enemy dummies with live ammunition. Terrific explosions, set off by cleverly constructed booby traps shower the men with dirt or sear them by their nearness.

Smash Into Barbed Wire

The men literally bridge diabolically constructed barbed wire entanglements with their bodies. The first two Rangers advancing in the problem throw themselves into the air and squarely onto the sharp barbs, smashing the entanglement to the ground. The rest of the squad run across their prone bodies.

Across a muddy field and beneath low barb wire strands, other students inch their way on their bellies, hugging the ground because 36 inches overhead live machine-gun bullets are flying.

Other courses require the men to attain near marksmanship perfection while firing their weapons from the hip; to discover and render harmless booby traps; to scale cliffs with short lengths of rope; to do anything which will "kill the enemy first."

"It's past the theory stage. We're all learning stuff that'll help us plenty on the battlefield," commented Sergt. John H. White of Springfield, Ill., one of the 35 Negroes attending the school.

"This is great stuff—I've learned plenty," said Corpl. Gus Kalama of Madras, Oreg., an Indian.

"We can teach our buddies plenty when we get back to our outfits," asserted Staff Sergt. Leon Cutrera of New Orleans.

And they can, too, brother, they can.

Flier Killed Two Days After Writing Home

"And so it goes, until one day, 'as it must to all men . . .'"

A glimpse of what fighting men think and say on war fronts is contained in the following excerpt from a letter received here by a friend of Lieut. Howard A. Kelly 3d, who was reported killed two days after the letter was written December 10.

Kelly, a Baltimorean widely known here, was a grandson of Dr. Howard Atwood Kelly, internationally known medical authority and member of the "big four" of the original Johns Hopkins Medical School faculty, who died January 12. The letter, in part:

"Letters for some time have been hard to get, harder to write. Will try to keep in touch with you from time to time, however. Too much has happened since I first arrived in England to recount it here so I will just say I am, and have been for some time, in northwest Africa.

We are living under war conditions and they are not what most people picture when they think of the Air Corps. . . .

"I wish I could describe a raid to you the way it feels, but it is one of those things you have to experience personally. In brief, it begins with a great deal of preparation getting the ships ready and loaded and checked. The objective is studied from as much information as possible and the method of attack is planned. Finally everything is set and you taxi out for the take-off. In a few minutes you are in the air and taking your position in the formation.

"There is not much conversation on the way and things seem as normal as they would in a cross-country flight in the States. You know the time of arrival at the target and you watch the clock on the dashboard crawl by. Then, faster than you realized, you see your destination. The speed is picked up and there is a last-minute check on the instruments.

"Conversation picks up briefly—'Is this the bus to Baltimore?' . . . 'Clear the bomb-bays' . . . 'Give 'em hell, doc' . . . 'Here we go'—All this is over interphone; there is no talk between ships but you know how the others feel. And then you're in it.

"Black puffs of smoke begin breaking in front of the nose, off the wing, right overhead. They break suddenly in clusters and hang in the air like tiny clouds. You are twisting and turning, diving, climbing—anything to keep those clusters from coming too close. The sky is full of them and there doesn't seem to be room to fly through. They get closer and you hear the whisper of them as they break close. There is a gun-like report and a sharp pain in your shoulder. In the windshield, a large hole through the safety glass. You think you've been hit.

"The copilot's wrist is bloody and your shoulder feels numb. You can't go fast enough, you're crawling over the target. You've got to level off and fly straight to drop those bombs but you'd rather do anything than give those gunners a straight shot at you.

"You level off and hang on. Tracer bullets stream up past the nose. You can see them coming a long way off and they come so slow, so leisurely till suddenly they whiz by like miniature meteors. The light on the instrument panel blinks rapidly as the bombs are released and you are free to begin dodging again. You have all the speed you can get and the controls are like iron.

"What was seconds seems hours before you are clear of the flak and can relax long enough to take stock of the damage. Your shoulder is okay, just hit by a piece of glass going 200 or 300 miles an hour. Your hand looks frosted with splinters of glass sticking out. The copilot's all right, just cut. The bombardier crawls back. One side of his face is covered with blood, but he's okay. You call back over interphone—'Everybody all right?' 'Yep, all okay.' The ship's been hit a number of times, but it's flying and you're on your way back—you light a cigarette, the raid's over.

"And so it goes until one day 'as it must to all men . . .'

"Well, I've bulled enough. How's everything back home? Are you married yet? Would like to be there for Christmas, but may have a few packages to deliver here."

Wickard Bans Sale of Milk In Pint Size

By the Associated Press

A sweeping series of economies in the marketing of fluid milk was ordered yesterday by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, who decreed that deposits must be collected on bottles and other containers, and that no more pints or half pints shall be delivered to homes, or sold in retail stores.

The order, he explained, will conserve bottles and other materials, manpower, delivery equipment, gasoline and rubber tires.

The aim, Wickard stated, is to enable milk distributors to pay dairy farmers more for their milk, where necessary, while at the same time holding consumer price increases to a minimum.

[Pending approval from Wickard is a request of Washington producers for an increase of two cents per quart. C. I. Dunn, Agriculture Department marketing administrator for this region, said last night that although the new economy order would help local distributors, it would by no means absorb this two-cent raise. If granted, this must be borne mostly by the consumer, Dunn predicted.—Editor's Note.]

The deposit must not be less than 1 cent for each glass container of 4 quarts or less used in the sale of milk or cream for consumption off the premises of the handler. The deposit on milk cans and cases must not be less than 25 cents each.

The economies, which must be started February 1, follow:

1. All package sizes for milk below 1 quart are eliminated except where the milk is to be resold for consumption on the premises. This requirement will remove pints and one-half pints from retail stores and home delivery wagons.

2. Purchases must be confined to not more than two handlers unless the delivery from each handler is in excess of 300 quarts. This applies to retail stores, hotels, etc.

3. Delivery truck loads are limited to advance and standing orders. This is designed to save time of delivery men.

4. Milk returns from stores, hotels, etc., are eliminated. This requirement will end consignment sales and should, Wickard said, result in fuller use of delivery space and time.

5. Deposits must be collected on all glass bottles, milk cans and cases. This is designed to lengthen the life of the containers and reduce replacement costs.

[Dairy officials in Washington contacted last night pointed out that most of these points already have been effectively practiced in Washington for some months. In discussions of economy measures with dairymen, all of these points except the limitation of purchases to two handlers were brought out, Dunn said. Dairy officials stated that the deposit requirement would have been put into effect by February anyway if the Secretary's order had not been issued.—Editor's Note.]

Senators Wait For McNutt to Explain 30 Jobs

Approval of 30 persons for major jobs in the War Manpower Commission was postponed yesterday until their prospective boss, Paul V. McNutt, explains to the Senate Military Affairs Committee why the men are needed and what they will do.

The committee agreed to call War Manpower Chairman McNutt to testify Tuesday on the proposed jobholders, after members were said to have objected to approving men for Federal positions paying from $4600 to $6500 a year without some more information on what the titles of their future jobs mean.

Members said that no individual appointment was questioned before the decision was made to ask McNutt to explain the 30 jobs.

The manpower appointments are before the committee as a result of congressional action, initiated by Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, during the last session requiring Senate confirmation of all Manpower Commission appointees to posts paying $4500 or more. The 30 names were sent to the Senate January 11.

2 Air Transports Are Missing

Sierra Nevada Mountains.

Announcing the searching last night, Vice Admiral John W. Greenslade, commander of the Western Sea Frontier, said:

"The surface search will be continued. Additional air searches will be carried out when weather conditions are favorable."

Searching for the missing cargo plane by both Army and Navy aircraft, apparently is continuing.

The Navy said that the big seaplane, overdue on its flight from Pearl Harbor to San Francisco, carried a crew of 9 and 10 Naval officer passengers.

Neither of the announcements gave the names of those aboard the two planes, but spokesmen said they would be released as soon as the verified lists of the passengers and crews are received.

News of the two missing Navy planes came only a day after the War Department announced the crash of a four-engined Army transport plane in Dutch Guiana. The crash—worst in history—cost the lives of 35 passengers and crew, 12 of whom were Washingtonians.

Bottleneck Spotters

New Orders Expected to Settle Rubber-Gas-Ships Conflict

Special priorities directives will be issued shortly to the rubber, high-octane gasoline and escort vessel programs which will serve to spot bottlenecks impeding major programs and enable Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson to send in his "trouble shooters" to get them moving, it was learned yesterday.

The issuance of the directives is expected to settle for the time being the present conflict among the rubber, gasoline and ship programs and enable all of them to move along together with substantial portions of all major programs on schedule.

Recommendations along this line from War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson have been transmitted to the White House for final action.

The original conflict started with a demand from Rubber Director William M. Jeffers for highest priority privileges for two-thirds of his program. The damand was met at first by giving both rubber and high-octane gasoline special directives for 20 per cent of their program.

The directives instructed war suppliers to meet the production schedules called for in the directive, but to notify the War Production Board by telegram immediately if conflicts with other programs appeared.

In this way, WPB spotted conflicts among major programs involving more than 30 critical components such as valves, boilers, instruments, heat exchangers, etc. Wilson and his experts studied each situation and succeeded in breaking most of the bottlenecks.

However, Jeffers contended that he had not received enough assistance and pressed for additional priorities. All the other programs objected to granting Jeffers more than they received, and the whole question went to the White House for final decision.

Detailed schedules for all the programs are still being worked out with the understanding that all groups involved in the current conflict will receive special directives for substantial parts of their programs.

The Navy has been particularly insistent that its needs be recognized, contending, it was understood, that commissioning of a number of already completed destroyers has been delayed a month or more for lack of valves which Jeffers took over earlier.

Meanwhile Senator Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa announced that Nelson would be called on next week to explain why Jeffers had been "impeded," as Gillette put it, in his synthetic rubber program.

Another witness is expected to be Michael J. Madigan, expert consultant of the War Department.

Gillette has characterized the synthetic rubber situation as "worse than it was," referring to what he considered a lack of action on the program.

Jeffers was expected to get a directive for about 55 per cent of his program under the arrangement indorsed by Nelson, it was reported.

Flynn Name Saved Client, Group Told

the company received the "lion's share" of this business during the tenure of Flynn and two of his successors and that after Flynn left the chamberlain's office in 1928 the firm invested money in a garage in which Flynn was interested.

Daniel Daly, foreman of the Bronx County grand jury that investigated the paving-block case, told the committee a story of personal tragedy, declaring he served on the jury as a matter of civic duty, had discharged this duty to the best of his ability and had suffered financially and socially because the jury exonerated Flynn. Once a prosperous manufacturers representative, he responded "none whatever" when asked if Flynn had any connection with his recent appointment to a $3500-a-year Federal civil service job.

Kern, who was deposed as president of the Civil Service Commission by Mayor LaGuardia, identified the man he said was the beneficiary of Flynn's political might as Serge Rubinstein, previously named to the committee as the managing director of the Chosen Corporation, a British holding company, and, in charges filed against Flynn by Senator Bridges, as the close associate of "one Guiji Kassai," a registered Japanese agent in the United States until two weeks before Pearl Harbor.

Kern charged that Rubinstein entered the United States on a "fake" Portuguese passport in which Rubinstein was disguised as "Serge de Rovello," the illegitimate son of a Portuguese woman.

In truth, Kern asserted, Rubinstein is a man's real name and he was born, quite legitimately, in the Russian city now known as Leningrad, then known by its World War I name of Petrograd.

Voters Disapprove Of Flynn, Poll Shows

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Jan. 22.—A special public opinon survey by Gallup Poll shows majority of voters disapproving appointment of Edward J. Flynn as Minister to Australia. With Flynn's side of the case presented to the Senate committee Wednesday, Gallup organizations conducted a coast-to-coast survey by telegraph to test early public reaction. It found that 78 per cent have heard of the Flynn controversy. Those familiar were asked: "Do you approve or disapprove appointment of Edward Flynn as Minister to Australia?"

Approve, 21 per cent; disapprove, 52; undecided, 27.

"Any American citizen would have been sent to jail if he had come into the country on a fraudulent passport—and so would an alien—unless he had retained the firm of (Monroe) Goldwater and Flynn," Kern declared.

Entertained at White House

"Not only has Rubinstein avoided prosecution for his passport fraud, but he has been invited to and entertained at the White House, yet ordinary American citizens, of which I am one, have never been admitted to the White House.

"Mr. Rubinstein has no other qualification for such preferred treatment except his retention of Goldwater and Flynn."

Kern cited an affidavit filed in connection with a Rubinstein law suit in which, he said, the Russian admitted that he was not "de Rovello," as evidence of Flynn's knowledge of his law firm's client.

Rubinstein, declared the witness, "helped" discount notes and bills of exchange involved in the shipment of machinery to Japan, contributed 50,000 yen to a charity for the families of Japanese sailors killed in the China war and is defendant in an action for recovery of one and three-tenths million dollars which the British government claims was "illegally exported."

Rubinstein, said Kern, admitted knowledge of the claim and joined the firm of Goldwater and Flynn in assertions that the money claimed by the British would not be transferred out of the United States. The assertions, he stated, were made to avoid court action restraining transfer of the funds.

Kern cited a newspaper story stating that the funds had been transferred, as evidence that the promise of Rubinstein and his law firm was not kept.

(The White House party at which Rubinstein was a guest was a charity affair given by Mrs. Roosevelt, a friend of Flynn said last night. Rubinstein's name was submitted for inclusion on a large White House guest list because it was believed that he might make a contribution. Flynn's friend said Rubinstein donated about $400.)

Herlands followed Kern to the stand with emphatic denials of intimations by Kern that Mayor LaGuardia attempted to bury the Flynn case. (LaGuardia will testify today.)

Was Dewey Aide

Herlands was chief assistant to New York Gov. Thomas E. Dewey when Dewey, a few years ago, was making a national reputation as "racket buster." Not only were city-owned station wagons used to transport city workers on the 108-mile round trip to the Flynn country home at Carmel, N. Y., but, Herlands told the committee, he had evidence showing that Robert Moran, former Bronx commissioner of public works and friend of Flynn, had permitted Flynn to use station wagons and other city vehicles to carry his luggage and his friends at city expense.

Kern Blamed

It was Herlands' contention that Flynn could have been indicted in the paving case, but he cleared Bronx District Attorney Foley of responsibility for the "no bill" returned by the Bronx grand jury in May, 1942. He blamed Kern for the failure to indict on the ground that the civil service commissioner, by making an independent investigation, made it possible for Flynn's friends to learn that investigations were under way.

Herlands also contended that: "This case has suffered Kern's kiss of death. Had somebody presented this case in a professional way so that the real issues were not obscured by secondary issues, the grand jury would have indicted Flynn."

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, and James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany, have indorsed Flynn in letters to Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, the committee chairman, it was disclosed yesterday.

Nelson Selects Krug as U. S. Power 'Czar'

in WPB and will have a seat on the WPB Requirements Committee as a claimant agency alongside the other "czars" and the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission.

One of his first requests to the requirements committee is expected to be for steel and equipment to go ahead with a number of natural gas pipeline projects comparable in total scope to the one additional pipeline which Ickes has requested for petroleum products.

Differing only slightly in requirements, the two projects would demand pretty much the same materials. Since the country only has enough capacity to provide enough seamless pipe for one of the projects, granting of a go ahead to both projects would involve the use of steel plates which would conflict immediately with the Navy's escort vessel program and the Maritime Commission's merchant shipping program.

Gas is expected to become a major problem next winter when increasing demands by war plants coupled with normal winter demands will be felt. To meet this problem, a three-fold program involving conversion of some gas heating equipment to coal, pooling of facilities in shortage areas, and building of new pipelines is being mapped.

Conversion from gas to coal is expected to be as urgent a matter next winter in shortage areas as conversion from oil to coal was this winter.

The exact boundaries of the shortage areas have not been delineated as yet, since a great deal will depend upon what action the War Production Board's Requirements Committee takes on the pipeline question. However, a substantial portion of the United States will be affected.

Up to Committee.

WPB power people are said to feel that the whole question is really one for the requirements committee to decide, their program to be tailored to any "strategic" decision taken.

So important does Nelson regard Krug's new job that it was said he first secured White House approval before making the appointment.

Expansion of gas consumption for most consumers has been "frozen" for sometime by a WPB order forbidding new installations. However, overall consumption has increased 25 per cent since 1941, with further increases expected next year to supply steel mills and other war plants which require gas in their operations.

Not the First Clash

If the expected clash between Krug and Ickes materializes, it will not be the first one. It is reliably reported that Ickes recently lost a struggle to prevent WPB from stopping construction of the Keswick Dam and the third power unit on the Shasta Dam in California while allowing a private power project on the Pit River to go ahead.

Ickes contended that WPB was following a policy of favoring private electric power interests, but WPB contended that the Pit River project would be finished earlier than the others and would consume less critical materials. The matter eventually reached the White House, where Krug was upheld.

The stop-construction order on Shasta was issued after additional electric power was picked up unexpectedly in Southern California as a result of pooling of facilities by six concerns.

Careful Scheduling

"Maximum war production in the last half of 1943," Nelson said in announcing the appointment, "is dependent upon carrying out the expansion of power, gas and other utilities as planned by the War Production Board. This will require the most careful scheduling, since power, gas, and other utility facilities require much of the same kind of equipment and materials as the other urgent programs.

"In recent months, it has become clear that the major difficulties in the scheduling of key components involves rubber, high octane gasoline, ships and utilities. The establishment of the Office of Power Director as a claimant agency puts all on the same footing and permits them to be programmed concurrently.

"The purpose of this arrangement is not to put the programs in competition with each other, but to fit all of them together into an orderly and integrated construction program which can be successfully carried out in the time we have available. In short, the essential components must be supplied to each program exactly when needed without putting any one ahead and thus delaying the others," Nelson said.

Workers Warned

Absenteeism Assailed by Rickenbacker

Special Dispatch to The Post

Detroit, Jan. 22.—Contributing to the national drive against "absenteeism" in war industries, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker declared here today that the boys on Guadalcanal are mad at the Japs at home would also be mad at some things back home "if they knew the facts about strikes and lockouts in this country."

Officials have become much concerned over frequent unnecessary absences of warworkers from their jobs and the resultant loss in production.

Speaking to workers at the De Soto bomber plant, Rickenbacker, who recently returned from a military mission in the Pacific which almost cost him his life, said: "You have no conception of what your fellow men—the cream of our manhood—are going through in the hell holes of the Pacific and on the sands of Africa."

"You on the home front," he said, "can bring these men success or failure. If you fail, you will become slaves like the French, the Dutch and the other peoples of Europe and Asia. Put in a little more effort; maybe that effort will save hundreds of thousands of your fellow men."

Of absenteeism, Rickenbacker said:

"That problem is the responsibility of workers. They must learn to be more conscientious. If Detroit were bombed there would be no absentees. There are no absentees in the foxholes in the Solomons."

fy it, stating that the soft coal industry can ship in more coal to meet the emergency if it has to.

On the fuel oil front, the situation seemed unchanged with dealers expressing a certain amount of optimism.

"The oil is coming in just at about the same rate as we send it out," they stated, and we believe that the worst crisis is past.

District OPA Chief Whitney Leary stated that no cases of coal shortage had been called to his attention.

Camalier ptimistic

Renah Camalier, consultant to Leary, said steady shipments of oil were coming in to Washington and the city "is getting along nicely." He described the fuel situation for Washington as in "pretty good shape."

The Sinclair Oil Co., yesterday agreed to end its reportedly discriminatory practices in the sale of fuel oil and thus ended a suit filed against the concern by the OPA in New York. Representatives of the OPA and the company reached an agreement after the Government agency had obtained a temporary restraining order halting the practice.

Check Asked On 'Arbitrary' U. S. Agencies

Representative Smith (Demorat), Virginia, yesterday called for a congressional investigation of "all acts of Government agencies exceeding their statutory and constitutional authority."

He introduced a resolution calling for creation of a special committee, which was referred to the House Rules Committee, of which he is a member.

The move, he said, was "directed at all the bureaucrats against whose arbitrary acts members of Congress and others have been complaining."

The resolution, he added, would give members of Congress "a chance to do something about it."

The resolution mentioned no agency, but included them all, the Virginian said.

Under its authority, the special committee would be empowered to require any Federal agency to cite its authority for any action taken.

Smith in the past has been especially critical of the wage stabilization order of the Office of Economic Stabilization, insofar as it was made applicable to salaries or wages paid by States and political subdivisions, except where fixed by statute.

He also criticized the action of the War Labor Board in intervening in a strike by employes of the City of Newark, N. J., in which the board, he said, "had the effrontery to propose that the City of Newark be ordered to reinstate city employes who were discharged for striking against the government and in violation of the law of that State."

In the latter case, the War Labor Board subsequently withdrew, ruling that it did not have jurisdiction.

Seattle Plants Resume

Seattle, Jan. 22 (AP).—Most war industries in the Seattle area, except for the Boeing Aircraft plants, returned to restricted production Thursday after weather conditions had brought virtually total paralysis for two days. Two deaths in Washington and one in Oregon occurred in accidents attributed to the weather.

War Agencies Adding 130,000 To Payrolls Before June 30

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Six key war agencies plan to boost their total employment during the 8-month period ending June 30 by more than 130,000 persons throughout the country, the Joint Congressional Economy Committee was told yesterday.

Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, committee chairman, said that figures given to Congress for the first time by the Budget Bureau in a three-hour closed session of the economy group showed that the Navy Department will have gained 94,496 civilian workers, while the Office of Price Administration will be increased by 27,279 employes.

Smaller increases, he said, are planned in the Office of Censorship, War Production Board, and the Offices of Civilian Defense and War Information.

All the employment increases discussed with Budget officials were those approved in appropriations for the current fiscal year, Byrd explained, and did not include any planned under the proposed 109 billion dollar war budget for the fiscal year starting next July 1.

Figures to Be Studied

Senator Byrd said that while the joint committee had not gone into the question of whether the employment increases were justified, the figures obtained yesterday, and those to be gathered in future hearings, will be presented to Congress for study in connection with new appropriation bills.

The committee, said Byrd, will be able to show Congress complete estimates on the expected increases in various types of Federal employes—stenographers, mechanical workers, custodial employes, professional and administrative employes, and others.

As yet, he said, the committee has not obtained an estimate of total Federal employment, nor a breakdown of Government employes in the District and outside, expected by the end of June.

Employe Rates

The budget figures, Byrd said, included these:

Navy Department, 624,331 civilian employes expected July 1, 1943, with an estimated annual payroll of $1,611,572,366. Total last October 31, 19,563 persons in Washington, 510,272 outside.

OPA, 63,000 employes next July 1, with 121-million-dollar annual payroll; total last October 31, 4670 persons in Washington, 31,051 outside.

Office of Censorship, 16,240 employes next July with $23,788,290 annual salaries; total last October 31, 863 in Washington, 11,104 outside.

WPB, 24,608 employes next July with $64,474,220 annual payroll; total employes last October 31, 6219 in Washington, 14,946 outside.

OCD: 1605 employes expected July 1, 1943, with $4,121,865 annual payroll, an increase of 445 employes during the current fiscal year.

OWI: 4178 employes expected July 1, 1943, with annual salaries totaling $11,142,000, compared with 3218 employes on October 31, last year.

Besides discussing the employment totals, Byrd said the committee went "very fully" into duplication between the Office of Education and National Youth Administration training programs. He voiced belief that the work could better be done by war industries, than by Government agencies, "especially the NYA."

Flier Tells Of 'Fun' With Miss Satterlee

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 22.—Dapper Capt. Owen Cathcart-Jones acknowledged at screen hero Errol Flynn's trial on statutory rape charges charges today that he and Peggy La Rue Satterlee had kissed and that he had bought her clothes and given her money.

The former Royal Canadian Air Force squadron leader told of accompanying Miss Satterlee, complaining witness, to night clubs, restaurants and vacation spots—always, he said, with her mother, sister or someone else going along on the out-of-town trips.

Once, he admitted, he visited a mortuary with 16-year-old Miss Satterlee.

"And Didn't Peggy play hide-and-seek among the corpses?", Defense Counsel Jerry Giesler asked.

"Yes."

"And wasn't the casket of an old lady opened?"

"Yes."

"And the sheet pulled down from a Filipino who was slashed across the middle?"

"Yes."

Tells of Visits

The 42-year-old flier said she had frequently visited his Hollywood apartment alone, occasionally in the evenings. Smiling, he admitted that he had appeared to be in love with her.

The prosecution concluded its case with the flier's testimony, and Judge Leslie Still adjourned court until Monday.

Giesler said the case for Flynn would be streamlined, that Flynn would take the stand, and that in all there would be about 10 witnesses.

Giesler also said he had not decided which count of statutory rape would be taken up first, that of Miss Satterlee or Betty Hansen, Lincoln (Nebr.) girl.

During his testimony, Cathcart-Jones, who said he was a Canadian subject by immigration, was asked by Giesler:

"You know, do you not, that you are an alien and if you make any admission involving moral turpitude with a girl of this age you are subject to deportation?"

The flier said he knew that.

Has Divorced Wife

Cathcart-Jones said he had a divorced wife and two children.

Flynn's lawyer introduced a photograph of Miss Satterlee which she had inscribed for the flier. The words "thanks is all I can say—little Peggy" appeared on the back. On the picture's face was written: "Loads of love—Scruppet," the American synonym of which, he said, was "ragamuffin."

The attorney asked whether Cathcart-Jones had bought Miss Satterlee a pair of $17 shoes.

"I don't know the price; I certainly bought her a pair of shoes," the witness responded. He denied that Miss Satterlee ever changed her clothes or dressed in his apartment.

When Cathcart-Jones acknowledged he knew a man named Peter Whitehead, Giesler demanded:

"Didn't you lie on a divan with Peggy in your apartment when Mr. Whitehead came in?"

"No," declared the flier.

He said he had taken several pictures of the girl, some of them on the desert, but denied ever having posed with her for nude or seminude pictures.

Last Holdouts In Coal Strike Vote to Return

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 22 (AP).—Eight hundred miners at the Payne Coal Co.'s Exeter colliery—last holdouts in a three-week wildcat anthracite strike—voted unanimously today to return to their jobs tomorrow.

The action came only a few hours after the United Mine Workers local at the No. 7 colliery of the Susquehanna Collieries Co., with 1600 members, made a similar decision.

Thus ended finally the revolt against U. M. W. leadership which cost the miners more than two million dollars in wages, kept one million tons of hard coal off the market, and won strikers only the assurance that their wage demands would be considered later. Even as the two last holdouts voted, production was fast approaching normal.

Canadian Steel Strike Ends, 13,500 Return

Ottawa, Ontario, Jan. 22 (INS).—The 11-day strike of 13,500 Canadian steel workers was settled tonight.

A joint statement by representatives of the United Steel Workers of America and the Dominion Government said the way has been cleared for immediate resumption of steel production.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King said details of the settlement agreement will be communicated to the men by officials of the local unions.

Approximately two-thirds of Canada's steel production has been tied up since a week ago last Tuesday, when officials of the Sydney plant of the Dominion Coal & Steel Corp. in Nova Scotia turned down a demand for a wage increase.

Parity Revision Plan Approved

By the Associated Press

The farm bloc's drive for higher parity prices gained headway yesterday when the House Agriculture Committee unanimously approved a bill to revise the parity formula to include the costs of all farm labor, including that of the farmer's family.

Parity is a theoretical price designed to give a bushel of wheat, for example, the same value in terms of purchasing power that it had in a past period favorable to agriculture.

Representative Pace (Democrat) of Georgia, author of the revision bill, said it would create "no considerable increase" in the cost of living this year, "certainly less than one billion dollars."

"Unalterable opposition" by President Roosevelt last fall staved off enactment of the parity change. Government experts then contended it would raise parity levels—used in computing wartime agricultural price ceilings and floors—by 10 to 12 per cent and would lead to an inflationary rise in the cost of living.

"In 1944," Pace said, "the parity change would increase the cost of living by less than 4 per cent. This is due to the fact that many of the principal commodities now are selling under prese ceilings at more than the recalculated parity would be."

Following the committee action, Representative Hope of Kansas, ranking Republican member said:

"I think it is very necessary to include the cost of labor, if we are going to be able to get the production we must have during the war period."

Committee Chairman Fulmer (Democrat) of North Carolina, said he hoped to get the bill before the House for action next week, and he predicted it soon would be on the President's desk.

The parity price revision would effect all agricultural commodities. Present law provides that no ceilings may be placed on farm products at less than 100 per cent of parity, and provides a wartime price floor for basic commodities at 90 per cent of parity, through Government loans and purchases, except for feed grains.

Pay-as-You-Go Tax Plan Urged On Committe

By Samuel W. Bell

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee, in a statement issued yesterday with the full support of the House minority leadership, called on the committee to assume its obvious responsibility and initiate pay-as-you-go tax legislation, "with or without Treasury recommendations."

The round-robin, worked out at a meeting attended by Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, Republican floor leader, served to force the issue of whether Congress is to await the Treasury's recommendations for 16 billion dollars in additional revenue, or enact the Ruml plan or some variation of it, before the March 15 tax collection deadline.

Delay Attacked

Noting that the Treasury had delayed its tax recommendation last year until March 3, forcing Congress to work until October 21 on an omnibus tax bill, the Republican statement said:

"There must be no such inexcusable delays this year. The responsibility for initiating tax legislation is squarely on the shoulders of the Ways and Means Committee, and it should proceed at once to discharge that responsibility, with or without Treasury recommendations."

Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who has been asking the Treasury for its recommendations on pay-as-you-go tax plans and the withholding-tax feature of this means of collecting income revenue, said that he favored separate and immediate legislation to put income tax collections on current basis.

"If the Treasury is not ready I personally would favor the committee going ahead anyway," said Chairman Doughton, who has promised to call the committee into session for a showdown early next week. He added as his own opinion, however, that he subscribed to the Treasury's objection to the plan proposed by Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and Treasurer of R. H. Macy and Co.

Ruml Proposal

Ruml has proposed that the personal income tax liability of 1942 become the tax liability for 1943, so as to put collections on a current basis, and, remove, in an era of rapidly increasing taxes, the burden of leaving the taxpayer always in debt f one year's taxes.

Representative Doughton, who made his comment after a brief huddle with the few Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee who could be marshalled in to a meeting late yesterday, still maintained that the Treasury would "lose a year's taxes" through adoption of the Ruml plan. In the same breath, h expressed his support for the pay-as-you-go program, provided "that some consideration be given for persons who cannot pay two income taxes in one year."

Thus Doughton touched on the major point in favor of the Ruml plan which the Treasury has been unable to dispose of—that is, that the only way to put the American income-taxpayer on a current basis without paying two income taxes in one year is to advance the tax clock.

Baby's Body Found At Union Station

The body of a two-weeks-old baby was discovered yesterday in a check room lock box at the Union Station.

Detective Sergt. R. P. Kelly of No. 1 Precinct, said the baby had been placed in the lock box on January 17 and had remained there for 24 hours. In accordance with custom, station officials removed the package containing the body and took it to the baggage room.

When the box wrapped in brown paper was opened yesterday, the body, enveloped in a blue blanket, was found. There were no identification marks.

SIEGFRIED SCHMIDT

Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation last night asked public assistance in a search for Siegfried Schmidt, 24, a German air force officer who escaped from a Canadian prison camp.

"It is believed he will make every effort to enter the United States and possibly attempt to return to Germany via South America," Hoover said.

Schmidt is 5 feet 9 inches in height and weighs 160 pounds. His complexion is fair, his eyes blue, and his blond curly hair is parted on the right side. Hoover said he is a student of languages and might frequent public libraries. He speaks some English.

Washington Still Can Be Bombed, Brault Warns

Just because Washington has not been bombed in a year does not mean that it "can't happen here," Judge Albert E. Brault, Montgomery County Civilian Defense director, told a mass meeting at Cabin John, Md., Volunteer Fire Department firehouse last night.

The meeting had been called to arouse interest in establishment of a special fire area on Conduit Road from Wilson Lane to Potomac. John Anderson, chairman of the Cabin John Fire Board, presided, and David J. Tuohey introduced the speakers.

Judge Brault said Montgomery County has one of the best-equipped and trained volunteer fire-fighting systems in the country and pointed to the importance of the firemen in civilian defense.

Chief J. W. Just, fire coordinator for Maryland, spoke on the importance of fire fighting and stressed the prevention program.

County Commissioner William H. Prescott praised Judge Brault and the Civilian Defense organization of the county and Precinct Warden George Graham told of the organization of the Conduit Road precinct. Henry Marschalk, secretary of the county Firemen's Association, traced development of fire fighting and prophesied great developments for the future, including pocket two-way radios and helicopters.

Little Business Unit's Activities To Be Spread

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 22.—Col. Robert W. Johnson, incoming chairman of the Smaller War Plants Corp., said in an interview today that he planned to decentralize activities of the SWPC.

Colonel Johnson, who headed the New York ordnance district of the Army, was named chairman of the SWPC and vice chairman of the War Production Board last Tuesday. He will take over his new duties February 8.

He asserted that the spreading of work among smaller industries could "only be done through the services and with the militant cooperation of the large prime contractors."

Colonel Johnson said he would make a flying survey of the country to obtain a picture of the allocation of Government work to small business and would present his finding to Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman.

He said he would study the administrative capacity of the SWPC, "develop plans, have them approved and start back through the country again."

He stated he had "complete freedom of action in a most satisfactory partnership with Mr. Nelson."

Colonel Johnson indicated he believed small business would survive the war when he said:

"If 85,000 small factories survived ten years of depression, one might properly assume that the majority of these have a place in the economic structure of the country."

He also disclosed that he has asked Lou Holland, whom he succeeds on SWPC, to remain as a deputy.

Navy to Step Up Recruiting for WAVES & SPARS

Plans for the immediate doubling of the ranks of the Women's Reserve of the United States Naval Reserve is under way. Stepping up of monthly recruiting quotas brings the Washington Procurement area monthly quota for WAVES and SPARS to approximately 125, Lieut. Comdr. O. J. Gullickson, U. S. N., director of the Office of Naval Officer Procurement, announced yesterday.

This area comprises the District, Maryland and nearby counties in Virginia and the number includes both officers and enlisted personnel to the two services, in which thousands of women are being recruited in order to release men for sea duty.

House Continues Group to Study Small Business

The House voted unanimously yesterday to continue for two more years the special committee created by the Seventy-seventh Congress to study the problems of small business.

Representative Patman (Democrat) of Texas was reappointed by Speaker Rayburn.

Patman complained that the Smaller War Plants Corp. in the War Production Board, created by Congress to help small business, had not acted promptly. Proper administration of the corporation as intended by Congress, he said, would make it unnecessary for many small enterprises to close.

Representative Ploeser (Republican) of Missouri, another committee member, told the House the corporation's accomplishments to date were "pathetic and constituted an insult to the intelligence of this Congress."

U. S. Finds War Job For Toolmaker, 102

Pointing up its assertion that there is a place for old men and women in wartime work, the United States employment service related yesterday it had gotten a job for a 102-year-old toolmaker.

"He is now working in a Middle West war plant turning out weapons which his great grandchildren are using in the Army to beat the Axis," the employment service said without identifying him by name.

"STILL, STILL WITH THEE"
— — — HARRIET BEECHER STOWE — — —

Still, still with Thee
When purple morning breaketh,
When the bird waketh
And the shadows flee
Fairer than morning
Lovelier than daylight
Dawns the sweet consciousness
I am with Thee.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Harriet Beecher Stowe has not only done the world a great service as a novelist — but also as a hymn-writer. This one appeared in her brother's Plymouth Collection in 1855 — and depicts the Christian's faith in the future he sees — life with God.

Three Church Celebrations Set Tomorrow

Three congregational and Bible Class jubilee celebrations will be marked tomorrow with special services.

They will be the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, on Twenty-third Street near Washington Circle; the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of Memorial United Brethren Church, and the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Miss Mabel Thurston's Bible Class at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Charles MacDonald Serson, assistant superior of the Society of St. John the Evangelist of Bracebridge, Ontario, Canada, will be guest speaker at 11 a. m. at St. Paul's Church, of which the Rev. Arlington A. McCallum has been rector 20 years. The vestry of St. Paul's includes William B. Sinnott, senior warden; Wales H. Jack, junior warden; Henry W. Starr, secretary, and Col. Harry F. Cunningham, Dr. M. P. Eslin, John J. Sutherin and Lieut. Lamar D. Munroe, vestrymen.

Miss Thurston, who organized her class with the aid and inspiration of Dr. Charles Wood, then pastor, has her expositions of the International Sunday School Lesson carried in the syndicated religious press throughout the land. As she teaches the class tomorrow, Miss Thurston will be assisted by Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor; the Rev. George Yount, assistant minister, and Theodore Schaefer, organist and minister of music.

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Memorial United Brethren Church, North Capitol and R Streets Northwest, will be launched tomorrow and continue through January 31 under the leadership of the Rev. Ira Sankey Ernst, pastor. One of the anniversary goals is 100 per cent attendance in all Sunday school classes.

The Rev. Dr. J. H. Ness, superintendent of the Pennsylvania Conference of the denomination, will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m., and the Rev. W. Ward Smith, of York Haven, Pa., a son of the local church, will speak at 8 p. m.

Church Institutes Planned

The great need for a more militant program of Christian evangelism in the Lutheran churches has prompted the Social Missions Committee of the Maryland Synod of the United Lutheran Church to plan institutes throughout Maryland and the District of Columbia to study local problems and needs in the expansion of the program of the church.

The first of these institutes in Washington will be held at Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, January 28, with a dinner meeting for ministers and their wives at 5:30 p. m. and a mass meeting for the clergy and laymen at 8 p. m. The speaker at the earlier meeting will be Dr. C. Franklin Koch, executive secretary of the Board of Social Missions of the United Lutheran Church. At 8 p. m. the Rev. Oscar W. Carlson, new director of evangelism of the board, will address the combined body of ministers and laymen.

The Rev. J. Harold Mumper is pastor of the host church.

Petworth Baptist Ordination Rite

An ordination service for 12 deacons will be held in the Petworth Baptist Church on January 28 at the weekly prayer service. Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention; Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church, and the Rev. T. Luther Holcomb, pastor of Temple Baptist Church, will assist in the ordination. The Rev. James P. Rodgers will present on behalf of the church a Bible to each of the deacons ordained.

This ordination service will be preceded by the regular weekly Sunday school workers' supper and conferences beginning at 6:30 p. m.

Boothby Lecture Before Sanctuary

"The Mystery Man With the Mysterious Number 666" will be the lecture topic of Evangelist Robert L. Boothby tomorrow night in Constitution Hall, Eighteenth and C Streets. During this lecture Mr. Boothby will erect a model of the ancient sanctuary which was built by Moses in the days of Israel, and illustrate this lecture from this replica sanctuary.

Prof. George Greer's well known a capella choir of 60 trained voices will present the musical features and the entire musical program will be broadcast direct from Constitution Hall over station WWDC. Leslie Mansell will lead the large audience and the evangelistic choir in hymn singing preceding the lecture at 7:45 p. m.

Evangelistic Drive Planned By Baptists

Baptist churches of the District are planning a simultaneous evangelistic campaign in each of the 32 churches composing the District of Columbia Baptist Convention. The dates have been set for October 17 through 31, and Dr. Roland Q. Leavell, former superintendent of evangelism for the Southern Baptist Convention, has been engaged to come to Washington and direct the campaign. Dr. Leavell will visit Washington in the near future to meet with the pastors and denominational leaders to set up the preliminary organization for the campaign.

Plans call for a noonday service in some downtown church for the benefit of making daily reports from the various churches and receiving daily instructions. Each church will invite its own evangelist. Men from both the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions will be included. The general program of the campaign will be under the direction of the Convention Evangelistic Committee composed of the Rev. James P. Rodgers, pastor of the Petworth Baptist Church, chairman; the Rev. Mike Elliott, pastor of the Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church; the Rev. A. Lincoln Smith, assistant pastor of National Baptist Memorial Church; Mrs. J. D. Torrey, treasurer of the District Women's Missionary Union, and Mrs. Carleton Long, vice president of the District Women's Missionary Union.

Methodist 'Victory Dinner' Scheduled for Friday

The annual "Victory Dinner" of the Methodist Union of Washington and vicinity will be held January 9 at Hamline Methodist Church, with an address by Dr. Lynn Harold Hough.

The dinner will climax the annual membership campaign of the union which is being conducted this week in all the Methodist churches of the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland, under the leadership of the campaign chairman, the Rev. George L. Conner. During the dinner, the roll of the churches will be called, and a representative of each will respond with the number of members secured for the union. The present membership is 3343, and the goal is 4000. The program at 7:45 conducted by the president, O. O. Thomen, will include a prayer by Walter W. Marlow, responsive reading led by Stanley W. Bell, solo by Justin Lawrie, and the address, "Living Democracy," by Dr. Hough.

Army Forces' Interest Grows

A marked interest in religion among men in the armed forces is reported by the Lutheran Laymen's League, one of whose projects is the international radio broadcast, the Lutheran Hour, for which Dr. Walter Maier is speaker.

An interesting percentage of the thousands of letters received by the organization from radio listeners each week, says John C. Wegner, radio secretary, come from officers and enlisted men not only in camps in this country, but also from many on foreign duty.

Taking advantage of the Lutheran Hour's offer of spiritual advice to those without church connections, many soldiers and sailors have sought counsel on a wide variety of questions. A problem which apparently troubled many of them was solved by the assurance that the soldier's duty to kill the enemy does not conflict with the principles of Christian faith.

'Fear' to Be Topic of H. Gordon Burroughs

"Nothing to Fear but Fear" will be the subject of the Rev. H. Gordon Burroughs, minister of the Church of Two Worlds, tomorrow evening at the Hotel Continental. Mrs. Lawrence King, soprano, will be the soloist. On Wednesday evening the minister will give a short lecture. A message service will follow.

50 Members of CWAC Will Attend Services

Fifty members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps stationed in Washington will be guests at services tomorrow at 11 a. m. at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Connecticut Avenue and Bancroft Place Northwest.

Dr. Warfield, Missioner, To Speak Here

Dr. Gaither Warfield, Methodist missionary to Poland for a number of years, will be the speaker tomorrow at 9 a. m. at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. Dr. Warfield was imprisoned for months in Poland, Russia and Germany, but managed to be freed and came back to America less than a year ago. His wife is a native of Poland.

Dr. Warfield was a graduate of Dickinson College. His D. D. degree was awarded to him while he was imprisoned in Germany. His home is in Montgomery County, Md., and it was from there that he went to his missionary work in Poland.

Dr. John W. Rustin, minister of Mount Vernon Place Church, will preach at the 11 o'clock service on the subject, "A Righteous Faith" and at 8 o'clock on "The Master Is Here." There will be special music at the three services, the choirs singing under the direction of R. Deane Shure and the quartet singing special offertory numbers.

Mrs. Langrall Speaks

Mrs. H. M. Langrall of Baltimore, Md., will speak tomorrow at 8:15 p. m., at the Baha'i Hall, 1308 I Street Northwest. Her subject will be "Character."

Mrs. Langrall is well known in Washington, Baltimore and other cities as she is actively engaged in Baha'i work.

Win By Discussion

War can be said to have been won only if it is followed by a better peace. And in gaining this end the faculties of our entire citizenry must be employed. That is the justification for the new United Nations Discussion Series which starts Sunday evening in Constitution Hall. Allied spokesmen are to be drawn upon for their information, and our own leaders will be present to put questions. At the first session, tomorrow, Dr. Van Mook, Minister of Colonies of the Netherlands Government, will speak, and he will be supported by a panel composed of Representatives Clare Luce and Sol Bloom and Senator Austin. The sponsors are to be congratulated upon arranging such a program in the city where so many present and postwar problems must be settled. Residents should respond in kind by availing themselves of really excellent public transportation to Constitution Hall for a Sunday evening devoted to victory. This is a people's war, but there will not be a people's peace unless the people have heads as well as hearts ready to work for it. Every citizen will be taking out a share in winning "a decent and durable peace" by enrolling in this new venture.

Ordeal By Bomb

The fact that the Luftwaffe is again bombing London only heightens the mystery regarding the long period of almost complete immunity from air attacks which the British capital enjoyed from the spring of 1941 to just the other day. One clue to the mystery is to be found in the circumstance that when the Luftwaffe did return to London, it returned in far less strength than it managed to employ night after night during the Battle of Britain. Wednesday's raid was carried out, it is estimated, by only around 30 fighter bombers, with 50 to 100 fighters as escort. Only six of the raiders actually got through to London, though one of them scored a direct hit on a crowded school and killed scores of children and their teachers. Fourteen of the raiders were shot down.

It is significant that, even when seeking vengeance for the highly destructive raids on Berlin, the Luftwaffe could not muster a large force. It is difficult, therefore, to avoid the conclusion that the Luftwaffe is both relatively and absolutely weaker than it was in 1940 and 1941, when it sought, unsuccessfully, to bring Britain to heel by air assaults alone. The losses which the German air forces have incurred both in combat and through operational wear and tear have been accentuated by the decline in German aircraft production arising from large-scale R. A. F. raids on German industrial areas. It is far too early to assume, however, that Allied superiority in the air over Europe is about to become Allied mastery. That day will come. But it is not yet. In the meantime, the tragic death of a large number of London school children shows that Britain's ordeal by bomb is not yet over.

War Marriages

Many sociologists have long contended there is too much romantic idealism and not enough consideration of responsibility in American marriages. Under the emotional strain of war, this situation is intensified, and, as a result, a higher divorce rate usually follows war. That happened in the United States in 1919-21. A step toward curbing such hasty and ill-advised war marriages which has been taken by William Cardinal O'Connell of Boston is therefore intelligent. It would require couples in the Boston Archdiocese to notify their pastors a month in advance of their intention to marry. While this may cause some inconvenience to engaged couples who may wish to push up their weddings because of military necessity, its general effect in discouraging impulsive and imitative marriages will be to the greater good.

Two types of war marriages present unusual risks, according to Dr. James H. S. Bossard, professor of sociology at the University of Pennsylvania. One is the marriage on emotional impulse, the other the marry-and-run type. The romantic appeal of the uniform and of war itself and also the feeling that "everybody's doing it" causes the impulsive marriage in which the participants seldom know each other well and take no thought of future responsibility. The marry-and-run couples are those who separate immediately after marriage and do not have the customary opportunity to make the manifold adjustments preparatory to "settling down." These are likely to find more than the usual quota of complications when they take up their life together.

It is hard to deny young romance its fling at any time—much less in war, when youth is making the major sacrifice. But youth is being done a service if it can be discouraged from hasty superficial marriage that puts a mortgage on its future. We do not mean that romantic idealism should have no place in American marriage. Certainly it is to be preferred to the continental ideal of convenience or the Nazi ideal of biological service to the state. Yet, it should not continue to be overemphasized since it contributes to one-fifth of this Nation's marriages ending in the divorce court. Any measure that encourages more responsibility in marriage in this country is all to the good.

Labor Legislation

If coming events can be judged by the shadow they cast before them, we may take it for granted that the present Congress will enact some important labor legislation. The real question is not whether Congress will act, but what type of legislation it will pass. In the circumstances we would expect to find the leadership of the great labor organizations working overtime to formulate a program of reforms on which they can agree. Instead, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has sent to congressional leaders a resolution which seems to strike at any bill that proposes to correct abuses in union conduct, organization or management.

There are, to be sure, plenty of "dangerous and foolhardy antilabor measures being proposed in Congress." But that is precisely why labor ought to come forth with its own reform program. Merely to protest against the flood of antilabor bills is equivalent to whistling in the dark. We believe that there is a very real danger that the present Congress may go too far when it begins to legislate on labor. It may sweep away some of the safeguards heretofore thrown around the right of collective bargaining, instead of merely forbidding the abuse of that right. And this danger will be multiplied if labor takes a noncompromising attitude and attempts to uphold racketeering, union dictatorship, and irresponsibility as well as the right of employes to bargain through representatives of their own choosing.

The curious fact is that organized labor has become the outstanding champion of the doctrine of laissez faire. For many years it has consistently denounced that doctrine as applied to business and industry. Now, having solidified their own strength, union leaders are pleading to be let alone, just as did the captains of big industry. "It hardly seems the part of wisdom," as William M. Leiserson of the NLRB said recently in commenting on this strange turnabout, "for organized labor in the moment of its triumph to embrace the philosophy of its opposition." But that sensible comment did not interrupt labor's ardent pleas for laissez faire.

Surely there is enough statesmanship in the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. to work out a minimum program of reforms to serve as the basis for the forthcoming legislation. Such a program might well include an anti-racketeering bill, a prohibition against union contributions to political campaigns, and measures to require democratic control of unions and accountability of their officers for union funds. There can be no objection whatever to penalizing racketeers in the labor movement on the same basis that criminals of that ilk are penalized when they operate without the protecting cloak of unionism. It is inconceivable that the rank and file of working men, organized or unorganized, prefer to have sluggers and extortioners in their midst protected, as they are at present.

We feel certain, too, that workers would prefer to make their own political contributions, if any. It is a gross abuse of collective bargaining to force dues from every worker through the check-off and then permit dictatorial leaders to use those funds for any sort of political foray that may strike their fancy. The problem of insuring democratic control of unions is a challenge to Congress and organized labor alike. But it is a challenge that must be met. More and more unions are centralizing power in the hands of a few officials. That is an invitation to racketeers and little dictators. Collective bargaining through representatives of the workers themselves may be thwarted in this way as readily as through the union-smashing tactics of some employers. Certainly Congress is more likely to find the right solution if it has the sympathetic cooperation of union leaders.

German Gloom

Some days ago the German high command tacitly admitted that the Axis garrison at Stalingrad was surrounded by stating that these troops had beaten off attacks "from all sides." Yesterday the high command went further. In a communique which was undoubtedly the gloomiest to come out of Germany in this war it was stated that: "The German group in the Stalingrad area, which is closely encircled by the enemy and which is offering tenacious resistance to strong enemy pressure, had to wage heavy fighting yesterday against the Soviets, who are storming with far superior forces."

The obvious conclusion is that the days of the German garrison at Stalingrad are now numbered. On the first of January the Russians estimated that of the original 220,000 Axis troops in that pocket only 50,000 were left. This number may by now have been cut in half. So the one specific promise made by Hitler regarding last fall's campaign in Russia, a promise twice made, is now shown up as a deception. Moreover, it is not merely at Stalingrad alone that Russian offensive power is being demonstrated. During the past month Moscow has reported gains at many points along the far-flung battle line, particularly in the region of the Don bend and in the Caucasus. Indeed, it should now occasion no surprise if before spring arrives, the Russians are in control of Rostov, and there is a possibility that they may, by that time, have recaptured Kharkov as well.

There was a time when, with last winter's campaign in mind, Russian advances were discounted on the ground that they simply involved the recapture of territory previously abandoned by an enemy moving back to winter quarters. Such a viewpoint is no longer tenable. The Russian advance this time is for the Germans beginning to take on the dimensions of a rout.

Hoover On Food

The address that former President Hoover delivered before the National Industrial Conference Board was a notable contribution to a discussion of one of the most vital issues confronting the Nation at the present moment. That is the problem of food supplies. So much attention has been given to questions of farm prices as related to control of living costs that the production problems of the farmer have not been fully appreciated by the general public. Mr. Hoover, however, put chief emphasis upon the importance of increasing food production both as a means of winning the war and as a preparation for relieving the suffering of vast populations when the war is over.

As head of the Food Administration during World War I and chairman of numerous relief organizations that fed the starving millions of Europe both before and after that war, Mr. Hoover is qualified to speak on the question of food supplies both as an experienced administrator and as a great humanitarian. His address emphasized in particular the need of an increasing output of meats and fats. He used statistics to good advantage in showing that in proportion to population, our supplies of beef and cattle and hogs are far below those of the last war. Moreover, exceptionally large slaughterings of breeding stock are depleting herds to an alarming extent.

In Mr. Hoover's opinion, the major obstacles to expanding the output of meats, fats and other vital food products are labor shortages, defective methods of food price control, and machinery shortages. The replacement of two million men drawn from farms into the armed services and munitions industries easily constitutes the most formidable and most pressing problem now confronting the Administration on the home front. So far the War Manpower Commission has done next to nothing to relieve the situation except to order local draft boards to defer certain essential agricultural workers. This timid negative approach will not, however, suffice. For modern farming, as Mr. Hoover points out, calls for skill in nursing crops and livestock. It also requires mechanical ability. Women and children can help at lighter tasks, and some women could eventually be trained to take over heavier duties. But the farmers' labor needs are immediate and pressing. Consequently, Mr. Hoover's suggestion—which we ourselves have proffered from time to time—that farm boys in the Army might be furloughed at planting and harvesting seasons is well worth consideration. Although there are obvious disadvantages to releasing soldiers from regular training even for limited periods, in a grave emergency furloughing might be the lesser of two evils, the other being the permanent release of drafted men for work on the farms.

REFUSAL, WITH WISDOM

Once when tall mountain pines were winter-white
And the hill-path sloped away in crystal,
Sprinkled with earth's own stars, fashioned of snow,
He came to her. His breath curled lazily
And only his smile flamed, warming the day.
The strangeness of his words, quickly spoken
To a hill-girl's ears, made her heart know fear.

There was another land than this he told her;
A land where prairie grasses stretched to distance.
There were no trees, dripping with snow, to hide
The sky or shadow earth. There was just space.
He could not see that hills were part of her,
Nor that tall pines were rooted in her soul.

She would have traded hills for prairie land,
But not to one who could not understand.

ANOBEL ARMOUR.

South America At War

By Virginia Prewett

A Reckoning Factor

SENATOR Burton K. Wheeler of Montana has raised a question about South America.

At a meeting of the Senate Agricultural Committee investigating the synthetic rubber program last week, Senator Wheeler demanded, "angrily," according to press reports, "Who were the master strategists who shipped a number of tires—we don't know how many—to five South American countries in advance payment for rubber intended to go to the United States later on? I can't understand such action. . . . South America isn't in the war."

It so happens that soon after the shipment of tires that raised Senator Wheeler's ire went down to west coast countries, where they were urgently needed to keep wheels turning, Brazil delivered to one of our East Coast ports a shipment of Brazilian-made tires numbering more than we had sent down. The shipment was not made from Brazil directly to South America's west coast because of time and ship-route factors. But this is not the main point. The question Senator Wheeler raised is about South America's part in the war.

Brazil's Assistance

To begin with, Brazil has about half South America's area and almost half its people. Brazil declared war on Germany and Italy months ago. Her army, air forces, navy and war production are being expanded as fast as possible. Brazil has built and is building destroyers. Her navy has for some months been convoying "outside hemisphere waters," and a fair inference is that they are convoying side by side with the American Navy on routes to our African fronts.

Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Venezuela, Bolivia, Uruguay and Paraguay, and now Chile, all South American countries, have broken diplomatic relations with the Axis and taken vigorous steps against subversive activities.

Ten of the remaining 12 Latin-American countries have declared war on the Axis. They are Mexico, Cuba, Costa Rica, Panama, Honduras, El Salvador, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Nicaragua and Guatemala.

The United States is today turning desperately to Latin America for a large number of strategic and critical materials that we cannot wage war without. Loss of sources in the East, tremendous increases in demand and the submarine war on our shipping combine to make getting these materials one of the most critical problems now facing this Nation.

Here are examples of supplies that come from South America:

Since Malaya, the Dutch East Indies and Siam are lost, Bolivia, normally producer of 20 per cent of the world's tin, is the United Nations greatest single source of this highly strategic metal.

Quartz crystal goes into radio equipment, gun-sights, range finders, periscopes, airplane and submarine detectors and other precision instruments. Brazil is the world's only producer of high-grade quartz crystal in commercial quantities. It all goes into United Nations war manufacturing today.

Over 90 per cent of our quinine came from the Dutch East Indies. Bolivia, the world's second producer, is now, with Peru, our chief source in a war that is taking and will take hundreds of thousands of Americans into tropical areas where fever strikes down more men than the enemy.

The United States is today, for the first time in its history, a net importer of oil. Venezuela produces about 10 per cent of the world's oil, ships to us and has for long been a main source for Britain's armies. Peru's small gasoline output is keeping war ore production going along the South American west coast. Both Ecuador and Bolivia produce small but not important quantities of oil. Argentina produces for her own use.

Rubber Production Increases

Latin America's wild rubber trees are today not only one of our last slender sources of natural rubber, they are our only hope for an early increase in natural rubber production. Brazil has by far the greatest output, but we are pushing production in 13 Latin-American republics. Six of these, Brazil, Colombia, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador and Venezuela are in South America.

Besides these, we are getting out of South America with their full cooperation, antimony, aluminum, berrylium, chrome, copper, industrial diamonds, graphite, iodine, manganese, mercury, mica, platinum, nitrates, titanium, tungsten, vanadium, zinc, zirconium, manila hemp, tropical oils, mahogany—for PT boats—balsa, hides and skins, tanning materials, wool, coffee, flaxseed, castor beans. We are getting these and other materials that we do not produce at all or do not produce in sufficient quantity in time of peace, much less in war.

Latin America and South America's part in the present global war is far from being limited to that of supplier of materials, although this role is tremendously important. In recent critical years, the Axis waged a determined propaganda battle for Latin America, but in the military showdown, the governments of all but two of these countries have thrown their weight fully behind the United States. Latin America holds in fee many vital United States economic, political and military defense interests. Though this has been recognized in our foreign policy since Monroe, these interests have never been so great as today.

The Fall Of Tripoli

By Barnet Nover

The Final Stage In North Africa

ON NOVEMBER 5, 1942, after an offensive of less than two weeks, Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, commanding the British Eighth Army in Egypt, announced that "There is no doubt of the result—an absolute and complete victory. The Boche is finished."

There were many at the time, both here and in Britain, who viewed this sweeping claim with profound skepticism. It was remembered that over a period of two years British spokesmen, including Winston Churchill himself, had sometimes allowed their enthusiasm to get the better of their judgment so far as North Africa was concerned. And in November Rommel's reputation as a miracle man had not yet been deflated.

Twice before the Axis forces had been driven out of Egypt and Cyrenaica only to make a spectacular comeback. The depressing possibility was not ignored that history might again repeat itself and tended to curb the exaltation engendered by the Eighth Army's great triumph.

THIS WEEK, 2½ months after the victory at El Alamein, forward units of that same army marched into Tripoli—1200 miles from their starting point.

In Libya the British victory is now literally complete. But in this war, as in all other wars, the end of one battle only means the beginning of another. The only victory that really counts is the last.

To make permanent the truly spectacular gains made by the British in Libya the Allies must dislodge the Axis from its last remaining foothold on the continent of Africa. And that, in turn, can only be the means of a larger end—the destruction of German power in Europe.

IN TRIPOLITANIA the Axis hardly put up a fight. In Tunisia the story is a very different one. There the Axis has thus far done more than hold its own.

In Tunisia the Axis has had time to establish itself in force and may now be joined by the remnants of Marshal Rommel's Afrika-Korps. It has the very considerable advantage of very short interior lines of communication—Bizerte is only 90 miles from the nearest point in Sicily—whereas the Allies must bring their supplies and reinforcements across the wide and submarine-infested Atlantic. And the Axis forces also enjoy the advantages deriving from easily defensible terrain.

Nonetheless it is doubtful if Hitler can hope for more than the postponement of a conclusive Allied victory in Africa. It is unlikely that he will be able to prevent it.

THE HARBOR of Tripoli, which has fallen into Allied hands, is the best harbor between Bizerte and Alexandria. The scorched-earth policy which Rommel's retreating forces undoubtedly carried out before leaving the city, plus the incessant pounding which Tripoli has received from the Allied air forces, may make it difficult to use it fully for some time.

The experience of Liverpool, Murmansk, Tobruk and Bengazi prove, however, that no port can be knocked out altogether. It is very likely, therefore, that it will not be long before some Allied shipping will be able to use Tripoli for the dispatch of supplies to General Montgomery, thus easing the heavy load placed on the coastal road from Egypt.

Furthermore, Tripoli is only 200 miles from Malta, which after having been subjected to and survived the worst pounding any place has received in this war can now be used as an offensive base.

Furthermore, Bizerte, Tunis, Sfax, Souse and other Axis-held points in Tunisia, as well as Sicily and Sardinia now face a two-way aerial threat — from Morocco and western Tunisia, on the one hand, and from Tripolitania, on the other.

BUT THE STRUGGLE in Africa is no isolated struggle. It must be related to the larger struggle.

While the British Eighth Army was moving ahead in Libya the Red army was making tremendous strides in the Don Valley and the Caucasus. Even the German high command now admits that the Axis forces on the Eastern Front find themselves in an extremely difficult situation.

IT HAPPENS, of course, that in terms of numbers of men involved the struggle in Tunisia is small potatoes compared to the fighting in Russia. However, Hitler cannot safely transfer any forces from Russia to Africa if, in so doing, he weakens his strength on the Eastern Front any further. And what goes for manpower goes doubly for air power.

It is probable that, having failed to achieve his objectives in Russia last fall, Hitler assumed that this winter, as last, the Axis would be able to remain on the defensive without tying up too many men and any large part of the Luftwaffe. He may have felt it safe, therefore, to commit a portion of German strength to the retention of a foothold in North Africa in order to prevent the Allies from using Africa as a springboard for an invasion of Europe and the establishment of a second land front on that continent.

If these were his calculations they have obviously been thrown out of kilter by the Russian offensive. Yet, having accepted the Allied challenge in Africa, he cannot safely withdraw but must continue the effort to hold the Allies at arm's length in that theater. With the loss of Tripoli his task has not been made easier.

Lottery To Ease Taxes

I have recently learned that Representative Sabath has introduced a bill in Congress concerning the enactment of a national lottery. In my opinion a national lottery would be of inestimable value at the present time in bolstering up the spirits of many of our citizens who can hardly subsist upon their small salaries.

If we had a national lottery which would produce 10 billion or more dollars per annum this would lower our taxes and would also do away with the distressing condition under which many of our citizens exist.

I may explain that I myself often subscribed for the old English and Irish lottery tickets; and although I never won one dollar, still I had the great satisfaction of hoping—and also in knowing that my purchases had been the means of helping countries somewhat reduced in circumstances such as England and Ireland were at that time.

Outstanding Curse

The letter written recently by Mr. W. Gilbert with reference to smoking in theaters is timely, and this is putting it mildly. It is my opinion that incessant smoking is the outstanding curse confronting this Nation today. One cannot ride in a train or in a bus, or shop, eat in a restaurant or walk on the streets or work in any peace for pestiferous smokers.

Constant smoking in the Government doubtless accounts for much inefficiency. This, notwithstanding the fact that some of these people are supposed to have passed rigid physical examinations—the tests having been given perhaps by doctors who could not stop smoking long enough to make thorough examinations.

Congressional Authority

In our local paper we find the following quotation from your paper: "One of the most certain ways to lose a democracy is for the folks back home to lose faith in their governing body, Congress. The folks have lost that faith. I think it may be partly due to Congress itself in surrendering its authority and also due to propaganda which has been deliberately put out to discredit the Congress."—Dr. Brehm, new Congressman from the Eleventh District of Ohio.

All hail to a "why" Congress! Away with a "yes" Congress! It is not too late to clean up a lot of rubbish and restore America to its constitutional form of government.

Bonds Not Orchids

Noticed in yesterday's paper an item from Miami, Fla. It stated that women volunteer workers were presented with orchids as a token of appreciation. It also mentioned that these orchids were valued at about $3000. Surely no volunteer worker who has read, seen or heard stories of our men on the fighting front where an orchid would be trampled in battle without a thought, could help but feel that city officials have missed the point by not turning that token into some form to further the work they are doing. Could we suggest war bonds?

Three Nominations

Was the action of the President in nominating three "lame ducks" to places of honor and profit, intended to emphasize the depths of decadence to which Congress has fallen?

The press of the country is unanimous in condemning the appointment of Flynn, yet the party truck horse leaders in the Senate boast, "we will see that the appointment is confirmed."

A Sailor Writes

Dear Harriett:

Lay off that droop, Purkey. This is a naval war and he don't count. I am in the Navy where men are men and women are WAVES. I join up six weeks ago. No special reason. Except my feet hurt. I make good progress so far. I can sleep in a hammock most of the night. It took me five weeks to learn not to step out of a hammock the same way I step out of bed.

* * * *

It is like sleeping in a sling. I am all out of shape. When I get up I look like a half moon. How are you on knots? I know some new ones. The Navy is training me to wrap bundles in some place that must be full of shoplifters. They got knots in this Navy that was never heard of outside of it. But I ain't kicking. The fellow who should kick is the one who has to untie 'em.

* * * *

I got plenty surprises when I join the Navy. I am only in a few days when a gun is shoved into my hands. One reason I join the Navy is that I don't like carrying a rifle. I never seen a sailor with a gun. Not even at a football game with the Army. But they tell me its regulation.

* * * *

All navy equipment is called "gear." But it's heavier than any gears I ever seen and that goes for the transmission, universal joint and rear end. I am used to most everything. But I still can't figure out the big collar on my blouse. And why the pants are so wide at the wrong place. My mate tells me the wide collar comes from the old days when sailors put tar on their hair and wore it in braids. The collar was a sort of drip-pan. I just find out why the pants is big at the base. It is so I can roll 'em up to swab decks. Of all the bad luck in the world I don't wish you should ever swab a deck.

* * * *

Always right after I swab it the ocean comes over and cleans everything up anyhow. But that's the Navy for you. How are you Harriett? I seen your mother just before I join up. She tells me you hear from Purkey regular. But I don't think it can be on the level. Why would a romantic girl like you fool around with the Army? The Army can't even get to a war without the Navy personally conducting it.

* * * *

I hear Purk is in Africa. That's only for camel drivers, giraffe breeders and snake charmers. Me, well, I get everywhere and see everything. I only been in six weeks and I feel glamorous. It can't be just the salt water. Let me hear from you as I often think of you as the best eyefull in our town.

Affectionately,
SINBAD SHUGRUE.

$25,000 Net

Persons having net income of $25,000 or more, after paying large sums to State and local governments, are already taxed half of their remaining income by the Federal Government. If they are now compelled to pay everything above $25,000 net to help support the war, their net additional contribution will probably amount to around one-third to one-half million dollars, and this will cover war expenses for only three or four days out of the year. The rest of us will, perforce, have to pay for the other 361 days. Obviously, therefore, the issue of taxing away all income above $25,000 net is not primarily a question of finance.

Those opposed to limitation of income usually base their arguments mainly upon the ground that high incomes are rewards for competence. But why should competence be rewarded? On the basis of abstract justice, much is to be said in favor of the communistic doctrine that the least competent should receive the highest income in order to offset, at least partially, their other deficiencies. Why should a man be penalized for having stupid parents?

However, many economists point out that, up to date, those nations in which competition has been most free are the ones in which progress has been most rapid, wages have advanced most, and the common people have enjoyed the greatest prosperity.

But this is wartime. Does not patriotism now furnish sufficient incentive to make each man do his best? Such does not seem to be the case with laborers, for they have everywhere been striving vigorously for wage advances, in many cases striking to enforce their demands. Are all laborers unpatriotic and all captains of industry super-patriots? Now is when efficiency in management is most needed. A decrease of even two or three per cent in the efforts of management will probably more than offset any revenues gained by the Government through income limitation. To assume that, if rewards are taken away, managers in general will not curtail their efforts more than two or three per cent, stretches one's faith in human nature very far.

The average man is also likely to overlook the fact that, in a capitalistic society, most of the funds needed to finance industry come from the savings of the wealthy.

But why not levy the tax and let the Government do the saving? This question brings up the crux of the whole issue. When the Government does the saving, it owns the industries of the Nation, and private enterprise is out. Furthermore, there is as yet no indication that a socialistic state can function effectively without a dictatorship.

The Truth Which Will Prevail

THE Associated Press reports that the Republican leaders in Congress have decided not to support an attack on lend-lease.

LIPPMANN

No other decision was possible. To oppose lend-lease today, to suggest that the United States should not do all in its power to help our allies fight our enemies, would be just about as sensible as to suggest that we economize by closing down the Panama Canal and dismantling Hawaii. The British Isles, Russia, and China are so obviously vital to us that Senator Wheeler, for example, who was no enthusiast for lend-lease two years ago, is now proposing to defeat the Germans by relying almost entirely upon lend-lease shipments to our allies.

That is going further than a prudent estimate of the facts can justify. But it shows what a political howler the Republicans would have made if they had taken the position that only Americans must use American weapons, and that Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hopkins must not be allowed to deprive Americans of the privilege of fighting a good big bloody single-handed war against the Germans and the Japanese.

LEND-LEASE will be continued for the same reason that it was adopted, two years ago, once the compelling logic of supporting our allies had been laid before the people. What is more the underlying principle of lend-lease will for the same compelling reasons be extended into the period which follows immediately upon the armistice and lasts until order has been restored.

This will be done, not because we are Lady Bountiful or Santa Claus to the human race, but because at bottom our vital interests demand it. Once the realities are examined, the case will be so obviously compelling, that public men who are now committing themselves to oppose it will wish they had not been in such a hurry.

THE TESTIMONY which was brought forward two years ago against the adoption of lend-lease will show, if we read it now, that the opposition thought we had a free choice between "intervention" against Hitler and "staying out of the war." They would not and could not believe, though the matter was explained to them, that Japan and Germany were allies in aggression, and that if Britain fell, Germany would attack us in South America while Japan ran wild in the Pacific. A month before the Japanese struck at Pearl Harbor, a majority of the Republicans in Congress during the debate on repealing the Neutrality Act, had not yet grasped the idea that the war for us would start in the Pacific, and that we had to support the British and the Russians if we did not wish to fight a two-ocean war with a one-ocean Navy.

Some of these same gentlemen are now thinking that once we have defeated our enemies, the problem of American security will have been solved. They are just as much mistaken now as they were two years ago.

IF THEY prevail, it is not necessary to be a prophet to see what will happen. Let us see where they would lead us. They are anti-British and do not wish us to form a working partnership with Britain to keep the peace and promote the reconstruction of the economic life of the world. They are anti-Russian and are spoiling for a quarrel with the Soviets. They are unfriendly to the Fighting French and look with a jaundiced eye upon the strong, proud spirit which General de Gaulle is bent on impressing into the broken and demoralized body of the French nation. They do not like the government-in-exile, and think they may deprive us of some of our butter and eggs to feed their starving compatriots when the war is over.

Moreover, some of the former isolationists are getting ready to think that once the fighting stops, we can find civilian jobs for some 30 million American soldiers and warworkers by closing our frontiers—shutting down exports and imports to the barest minimum which can be paid for in gold cash—and doing nothing to assist Europe and Asia to return to normal.

LET us suppose that we followed this philosophy, imagining that we were hard-headed realists who were not going to be hornswaggled by a lot of damned foreigners. What would the damned foreigners do? They would look at our wealth and our power and then they would look at the unfriendly spirit in which we used our wealth and our power. They would look at their poverty and their ruins, their dead and their maimed, and they would say: "Well, that is not what we hoped for. But the Americans have decided that it is now a matter of each for himself and the devil take the hindmost. And so, as the answer, as the defense, as the insurance against that kind of America we must go in for a Europe for the Europeans and an Asia for the Asiatics."

The result, in other words, of our rejecting the partnership of the United Nations will inexorably be an ever closer alliance of those nations, with us on the outside looking in. The currents already beginning to run in that direction, and every time a public man makes a destructive speech, every time an American admiral or general, or diplomat, or Washington official uses brass knuckles in his negotiations with the United Nations, there is a push in that fatal direction.

THUS we shall have to cure ourselves of the illusion that the issue is whether we shall return to isolationism, whether we shall help ourselves or help others. We could return to isolation. We could become quite isolated—that is always possible. Japan has managed to become isolated in Asia. Germany has twice managed to become isolated in Europe. We could become isolated too, and indeed we shall, if we listen to those who do not know better.

We could leave ourselves without a friend in the world. We could deprive ourselves of all our allies. We could turn our backs upon the British, the Russians, the French, the Dutch, the Scandinavians, the Poles, the Serbs, and the Greeks. But if we do, let us at least not be surprised if, after we have refused to work with them, they then unite and work against us, and that having chosen isolation we find ourselves isolated in a world where we are universally disliked and suspected.

THAT IS why, when the true case for a constructive foreign policy has been presented to the people, they will support it, as they did lend-lease, as an American interest of such compelling importance to the welfare of the Nation that no demagogy can blind them to it.

McNutt's Problems

MANPOWER BOSS Paul McNutt has been sessioning with the Truman Committee regarding certain problems which touch the lives of everyone. They include size of the Army, where we will get labor for farms, and whether Army shall be used in mines and industry.

Senators on the committee were impressed both with the gravity of the problems McNutt placed before them, and his general views regarding them.

McNutt revealed that Undersecretary of War Patterson had been talking to him about a total armed force of 11 million to 15 million men. This included not merely the Army, but the Navy, the Coast Guard and the Marine Corps—everything except the merchant marine.

However, McNutt pointed out that shipping facilities and submarine warfare seriously limited the number of troops which could be sent abroad and supplied.

Army Will Harvest Crops

McNutt was asked a great many questions about farm labor, especially by Senator Truman of Missouri. He replied that the Army had been unwilling to let men go home on furlough to help with the crops because this hurt morale. However, he said the Army was working on a plan to send Army units into farm areas, in battalions or companies, and have them help with farmwork on an organized basis under Army command.

"What about sending the Army into the coal mines?" someone asked at this point.

This got no definite reaction. Though the matter was not discussed in detail, it seemed to be the unspoken feeling of the committee that too big an army going into industry and agriculture on an organized military basis might come close to developing a militarized system in the U. S. A. similar to that against which we were fighting in Europe.

Only one member of the committee, Senator Hatch of New Mexico, felt that the armed forces should be given free rein to go ahead and build up tremendous strength not subject to civilian check and supervision.

Other committee members expressed the view that it was only natural for any military leader to want the Army to be the biggest in the world; so a civilian check-rein by the White House or Congress was necessary to balance farm labor and industry against armed strength.

Finally it was decided that the most important problems to lick before increasing the Army to world-beating proportions was the submarine and shipping.

On Strike

In more than 100 years of Congress, the first strike of a Congressman will occur soon when forthright Jimmy Morrison from Louisiana's Sixth District resigns from five committees.

Jimmy's idea is that these five committees—Coinage, Weights and Measures, Mines and Mining, War Claims, Invalid Pensions and Public Lands—are so much chicken feed and an insult to his district. If he cannot serve on the Agricultural Committee, in which Louisiana is vitally interested, or on Appropriations, Morrison says he would rather conserve his time for other things.

All of which came as something of a bombshell to Democratic leaders who expect first-term Congressmen to be seen and not heard.

"I don't think the Administration will like it," advised one of Morrison's colleagues.

He Doesn't Need 'Em

It doesn't make any difference whether the Administration likes it or not," shot back the Louisiana freshman. "They need me, I don't need them. They didn't get me elected."

"Folks will say you're a sorehead," advised Democratic Leader John McCormack of Massachusetts.

"In that case," replied Morrison, "I'll be right in with 90 per cent of Congress. As far as I can see everyone is sore except the Republicans."

Morrison was barred from the important Appropriations Committee on the ground that he was a first-termer. Meanwhile, Freshman Congressman James M. Curley, former Mayor of Boston, was appointed to the Appropriations Committee. This caused Morrison to remark:

"It's bad enough to pass up the leading district in Louisiana, but it's worse to appoint a man to the Appropriations Committee who is being investigated by the Justice Department. I suppose the fact that Mr. Curley and John McCormack both came from Boston has nothing at all to do with it."

NOTE: Congress is going to hear more from Jimmy Morrison, nephew of the Spanish-American war hero, Richmond Pearson Hobson.

Report Discounted

Eisenhower Supported

London.

A PREPOSTEROUS and mischievous myth" is the description given editorially by the London Times to stories that the British government was anxious to have General Eisenhower removed from the supreme command in North Africa. Other leading British newspapers have dealt just as strongly with this report in the last few days.

After discussing censorship problems in North Africa, the Times said yesterday:

"The lack of news has served only too well the purposes of hostile propaganda which, from the start of the Mediterranean operation, has been concentrated on sowing discord between the British and American peoples. If both had been better served in respect to information, Mr. Bracken, for instance, would never have been called on to deny so preposterous and mischievous a myth as that the British government is anxious to have General Eisenhower removed from supreme command. As he said, the British government has the utmost confidence in Eisenhower, who they have granted 'power of attorney' in North Africa."

In its last issue the Sunday Times, which has no connection with the daily Times, commented:

"Mr. Bracken pointed out that the British government gave General Eisenhower, as commander in chief of the joint expedition, the widest power, and fully indorses the use he has made of it. Such statements should help to kill the mischievous campaign of press extracts and radio comment sent backwards and forwards across the Atlantic, receiving additions at each exchange."

The Sunday Chronicle believes that the statements by Brendan Bracken and Harold Macmillan, the British resident minister in North Africa, will "dispel the fog and the suspicion that there are differences between the British and American leaders." "Sniping by Goebbels' sharphooters and impatient critics," it adds, "threaten to destroy, and will certainly delay, a swift and just settlement of the Frenh empire in Africa."

The Daily Express declares flatly that the British people "recognize the complexities of the situation, military and political, that confronted General Eisenhower, and it has absolute confidence in his judgment and sagacity", while Mr. Vernon Bartlett, in the course of a front-page article in the News-Chronicle, dismisses suggestions that there is any plot to replace Eisenhower by a British commander as "either childish or subversive."

The Gallup Poll

Half of All American Families Intend To Plant Victory Gardens This Spring

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 22.—The need for an intensive drive is indicated if the Federal Government wants to get more Americans to grow "victory gardens" this spring to help alleviate the food shortage.

While slightly more than half of the families in the country apparently plan to have a vegetable garden this year, that number actually does not represent a very substantial increase over last year, despite the growing food problem. The Institute did not, however, gather data on changes in the size of gardens.

The victory garden siutation was explored by the Institute in interviews with typical families in all States. Forty-eight per cent of those questioned said they raised a vegetable garden last spring. This year, with food shortages developing, the number planning to have a garden is 54 per cent.

Many families, particularly in large cities, are unable to have gardens even if they want to because of lack of grounds. As might be expected, the number who plan gardens this year is highest in rural areas and in towns under 10,000 population. In those areas the Department of Agriculture is struggling to persuade people to diversify their home garden crops.

Many families raise a patch of sweet corn in the back yard and call it a garden. That is not the Department's idea of what a garden should be.

It wants victory gardeners to plant a wide variety of crops, depending on the area in which they live—tomatoes, peas, string beans, spinach, carrots, squash, lettuce, and even soybeans.

While the victory garden idea has grown relatively slowly in the past year, the situation is considerably improved as compared to two years ago. Earlier studies by the Institute found that 41 per cent of all families guestioned said they had raised a vegetable garden in 1941, as compared to 48 per cent in 1942, and 54 per cent who claim that they are going to raise one this year. This year's gardens may be larger, on the average, than last year's.

Plans have been discussed in some cities for setting aside tracts of land on the edge of town where city folk may raise victory gardens if they wish to. One problem this year is the difficulty of obtaining garden tools and fertilizer, and also shortage of transportation facilities to carry people back and forth to town.

Captive Japs Keep Happy

They Like Swing

(The following story was written by Samuel Shaffer of 1709 H Street Northwest, Washington, a Marine Corps combat correspondent.)

Somewhere in the South Pacific, Jan. 9 (Delayed).—Behind barbed-wire entanglements at this Marine Corps base is the largest concentration of Japanese war prisoners in the world:

To the visitor fortunate enough to gain admittance, this prison camp provides a liberal education in the upsetting of firmly held beliefs about the inscrutable Nipponese.

Jap officers, enlisted men and laborers captured at Guadalcanal by marines—those I have seen—are anything but resigned and sullen prisoners of war, who brood about the misery of their lot, as they are pictured in many reports I have read.

Once over his astonishment that he is being treated like a human being and given more food than he has probably had for some time, the Jap undergoes a rapid readjustment. Often he becomes a happy-go-lucky prisoner with a passion for horseplay, cigarettes, American slang and swing tunes.

Imagine Tojo's discomfort if he knew that his warriors were calling each other "Hachi Maru," which is Japanese for "eight ball."

This started recently when two marines visited the camp to polish up the Japanese they had studied. One Leatherneck called the other an "eight-ball."

A prisoner, who possessed a smattering of English, asked what that meant. When it was laboriously explained, a smile wreathed his puckered features. He said "Hachi Maru." Within an hour these words were on the tongue of every prisoner.

Nor would Tojo appreciate the sentiments displayed by another prisoner when someone mentioned Germany in his presence. With thumb and forefinger of his left hand he gripped his nose firmly while the right hand shot forward in a Hitlerian salute.

The Jap soldier or sailer knows far less about the war than any man in the uniform of the United Nations. Officers are astounded by the state of general ignorance of world events in which the Japs have been kept.

Eight-man tents, which they keep scrupulously clean, house the prisoners. Reveille is at 6 o'clock, roll call at 6:30, breakfast at 7, lunch at noon, supper at 5:30, another roll call at 6 and taps at 8.

Each prisoner is allotted five native cigarettes daily, but they would gladly trade them all for an American cigarette. Their taste for things American doesn't stop there. Their favorite expression is "O. K." and their favorite tunes American swing.

Your Federal Income Tax

No. 12—Income Received

In making a return of income for Federal income tax purposes, all income must be reported except those items which are specifically exempt, a list of which may be found in the instructions attached to the return form. The report of income must include income "constructively received" as well as actually received, that is, income which becomes the property of a person during the year even though he does not have physical possession of it.

Income is constructively received when it is unconditionally credited to one's account or set apart subject to his order at any time. Thus, interest credited on a savings bank deposit is income to the depositor when credited, even though it may not be drawn down or even entered on the depositor's pass book. Income received for a taxpayer by his agent, such as rental payments, has been constructively received when it is received by the agent.

Interest coupons which have matured, and are payable, represent income constructively received by their owner, even though the coupons are not cashed, unless, of course, there are no funds available to pay the interest on the coupons. In the same way, dividend checks ordinarily become income when received, whether the checks are cashed or not. However, in the case of certain building and loan associations, dividends declared and credited may not be withdrawn by the shareholder until the maturity of the share in a future year. In such cases the dividends do not become income during the year of the credit, but in the year of the maturity of the share.

Another instance of constructive receipt of income may arise when one's debts or bills are paid by another or where a debt is forgiven. If this payment of a debt by another, or forgiveness of a debt by a creditor, is not by way of outright gift, but in accordance with some agreement, or business transaction, then the amount of the debt paid on behalf of the taxpayer, or forgiven to him, becomes income to him in the year in which such payment or forgiveness occurs.

It often happens that a taxpayer who owns property agrees that the income from such property shall be paid to a third party, or he may contract to perform services to a second party and it is agreed that the compensation shall be paid to a third party. In each case the amount paid to the third party at the taxpayer's order is income "constructively received" by the taxpayer, which must be reported as income in his income tax return.

More Bicycles Made Available

More bicycles were made available today for rationing in February to Easterners whose automobile driving has been curtailed by reductions in the value of gasoline coupons and the ban on pleasure driving.

The Office of Price Administration allotted 86,700 bicycles for rationing next month, compared with 85,000 for January, and increased State reserves from 25,500 in January to 32,900 in February. The State reserves are set up to meet requirements that may develop in excess of quotas.

Most of the increase was assigned to the 17 Eastern States where eligibility for bicycle buying has been expanded. Under present regulations any person doing work essential to the war program or public welfare may qualify for a bicycle by showing need for one.

Maybe baseball should be abandoned after all. A Tokyo dispatch, broadcast by Berlin and heard in Washington, says that the Japanese have abolished baseball as a means of putting an end to "hardly sportsmanlike" customs introduced from America.

POVICH

If baseball isn't good enough for the Japanese, maybe it isn't good enough for Americans, and maybe the White House shouldn't concern itself about preserving the game as an essential to civilian morale, and maybe the ODT should quit stalling and call all baseball travel off.

Maybe, though, it's just an honest difference of opinion, like which customs are considered good form and which are not. That difference sort of cropped up on December 7, 1941, when the Japanese struck at Pearl Harbor, which the United States thought was in very bad taste, although the Japs thought it was very much okay, and proudly acclaimed their feat.

If America and Japan don't see eye to eye on baseball and Tokyo's lead in abolishing the game is not followed here, it will be no great upset, of course. The Japs' own ideas of what constitutes sportsmanlike conduct has been more than slightly at variance with America's for some time now, beginning with the sinking of the Panay and embracing the rape of Nanking and the horror story of Hongkong.

The broadcast mentioned one of Japan's squawks against baseball specifically as "for instance, the preferential treatment accorded to members of baseball teams by university authorities." They refer, no doubt, to the American practice of sometimes giving scholarships to students with athletic talents and that of course is not only "hardly sportsmanlike" but no doubt horrifying to little sons of—er,—heaven who wouldn't gut a civilian Chinese with anything except a gleaming bayonet. If rusty, tetanus, you know.

These past twenty years, apparently, the Japs have been a misguided people. They used to think that they liked baseball, that it was a grand sort of game. They thought they wanted to learn it. They financed tours of Japan by Babe Ruth and teams of big league All-Stars, gave the American players handsome honorariums and retained such as Moe Berg and Lefty O'Doul in Japan as coaches at handsome salaries to teach young Japan the game.

They sent their own college teams, notably from Nagoya and other universities, to America to show their new skill at baseball, and it was all supposed to be very wonderful. If the Japanese teams weren't so hot, they didn't do badly, at least, and after all they had just begun to learn the game.

It was evident rather early, though, that the Japs never would amount to much as ball players. They could run and catch and throw the ball pretty well, but they were bums with the bat, as a rule. They never did produce a hard-hitting team. And their infielders were never too hot. Hands too small. Baseball was about the one sport at which the Japs had little hope of excelling.

They didn't have the luck and triumphs at baseball that they had with other American sports. They learned to swim well enough to carry off an Olympic title, and in one Olympic year they produced a skier who made the record jump despite the fact that there were no ski slides in his native Japan. As for swimming, they cannily introduced the practice of subjecting their swimmers to oxygen treatment before a match to improve their wind and speed, and that is now accepted practice.

But baseball sort of defeated them and so they suddenly discover that our game is "hardly sportsmanlike," which is probably better than admitting that they tried it and found themselves comparative punks at it. It's a bit of face-saving in the best Japanese tradition, though.

Moe Berg tells the story of how the face-saving business in the land of the Rising Sun extended even to the baseball diamond when a Japanese pitcher was knocked from the box by touring American teams.

The Japanese pitcher, who couldn't get anybody out and found himself removed from the box, didn't walk dejectedly off the field or otherwise display any disgust with himself," relates Berg. "I've seen them bow to the umpire before leaving the box, then go to the sidelines, motion for a catcher, and start throwing the ball as hard as they could. They were saving face. They were showing the fans they could still throw hard."

It looks as if I'm going to be forced to locate Mrs. M. Magee, whose letter we printed yesterday, Boss . . . I'm getting blamed for writing it to myself . . . which gives me an idea, at that . . .

I had a lot of response to that letter one of the boys in the office cleverly labeled "Haight Finds Strongest Link in Neighborhood Chain Store." . . . The National Association of Food Chain Stores sent it to member companies throughout the country . . . a Midwest chain is going to print 10,000 copies to send to all employes. . . . It's too easy to become a great man, Boss. . . . But it is only fair that I tell you that "Tillie," the heroine, realyy is Mrs. Juanita Juneau, who checks food at the Georgia Avenue and Underwood A. & P. . . . She's still good for a wisecrack a day, too . . . this morning when she was checking my groceries she looked at me and asked, "What, no tomato juice?" Boss, she must have had her scouts out last night.

When Phil Taylor, who skates on stilts, fell opening night it was his first spill since joining the Ice-Capades . . . he should have had six girls holding him up like I did . . . I got two passes for my act . . . I wonder how many he gets . . . and that's strictly kidding, Boss, because he is a marvel . . . I got a nice compliment while I was posing for that picture at Uline's . . . Chester Hale, responsible for brilliant direction and icing of the show, said my legs were glamorous . . . I asked him if I could quote him and he said, "Sure" . . . I hope Clark Griffith hears about that . . . if I'm not good enough to play with the Nats, maybe he will let me toe dance between innings . . . one of the best cracks around Uline's came from an employe of the adjacent ice factory . . . he looked me over and remarked, "Ah—a blockbuster" . . . but I'll bet the R. How about that Russ Hodges? I phoned him while he was on the air for WOL today . . . I though he was going to say something cute about me and what does he do but play the record, "Mr. Five-by-Five" . . . but I'll wager he didn't know the time was five minutes to five . . . and if that isn't a coincidence, I've got five fingers on each hand and five toes on each foot . . . remind me to make fives wild . . . Wilson High Stuns Tech With 25-24 Upset

Crazy Shot By Jawish Is Decisive

The Woodrow Wilson High team which "couldn't do anything right," and had two straight beatings to prove it, picked out the hottest foe in the interhigh basketball league last night to chalk up its first victory.

Expected to bow by a horrible margin, the Tigers put up a brilliant battle to edge Tech, 25-24, in the first half of a double-header on the latter's floor. The finale went to Coolidge, 32-24, after a shoving and scrambling scrap with Anacostia.

It was a crazy shot by Billy Jawish, only veteran on the Wilson squad, which robbed Tech of a chance to tie Eastern for the league lead. The squat forward took a pass from out of bounds with eight seconds of play left, fired blindly from off balance. The ball shivered through the hoop as though it was being forced in.

Biggest Upset of Season

Thus the Tigers were credited with the biggest upset of the season. In it they held the high-scoring Trainers even throughout, at various times holding leads of 8-6, 13-8 and 18-15, and never dropping more than three points behind.

One of those three-point deficits faced them with two minutes of the game left. Tech was out front, 24-21, when "Windy" Van Deuzen, regular Tiger guard, was waved out on four personals. Jawish took the whole thing in his own hands, however, cutting the deficit two points after an excellent pass from Jack Ogle and then dropping his "dream" shot.

Most of the final and crucial quarter was an individual battle between Tech's Keith Harder and Wilson's Stu Brown. Brown's late streak brought his total for the game to nine points, one less than tallied by Jawish. Center Harder, outjumped by Ogle under both baskets, still was good for eight points.

Fast and Furious

Wild and woolly was a poor description of the Coolidge-Anacostia thing. It rocked along evenly for a quarter and a half, then the Colts jumped into a quick 18-10 margin at intermission. There was little competition thereafter though the fierceness of play continued.

Billy Penn rang up 14 points for scoring laurels, and the losers Jim Flaherty and Pudge Nelson got 8 each.

Tonight, the four-way deadlock for second place in the series will be affected when Roosevelt and Central, two of the contenders, take on Western and Eastern, respectively. Eastern is the undefeated leader and Western is pressing winless Anacostia for last place.

Cards Rally, Score, 51-45, Over Gallaudet

Catholic University's basketball Cardinals had to stage a desperate rally in the last five minutes to turn back a scrappy Gallaudet quint, 51-45, last night at Roosevelt gym.

Tied at 22-22 at halftime, the Cardinals, who had whipped Gallaudet by a single point in their previous meeting, fell behind the determined Blue attack which halfway through the final half had risen to 38-28 proportions.

But at this point Dick Scanlon, Card center who tallied 19 points, aided by Fred Rice, who tallied 14, cut loose with a "hot hand" and dumped in basket after basket. With five minutes to go, Scanlon tied it at 41-41 with a layup shot and a few seconds later sent the Cards ahead at 43-41 with another bucket. From then on the Cards remained in command.

Holcomb, Robertson and Baldridge, with 14, 11 and 10 points, respectively, were outstanding for Gallaudet.

G. W. and Old Liners Renew Feud Tonight

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Maryland will be out to break a pair of George Washington court streaks tonight when the Southern Conference rivals clash at Eastern High School at 8:30 p. m. in the feature of three games for District college cagers.

The Colonials will take a winning streak of five games compiled in a 10-day period, into the clash with the Old Liners and also a string of four triumphs in the last four years of the G. W.-Maryland rivalry.

Today's schedule:

George Washington vs. Maryland at Eastern at 8:30 p. m. A preliminary at 7:15 between two Recreation League teams. Eastern, at Seventeenth and East Capitol, can be reached by Lincoln Park car from downtown Washington and bus from Southeast.

Georgetown vs. Army at West Point, 2 p. m.

Catholic University vs. 1301st Service Unit of New Cumberland, Pa., at C. U. gym, 8:30 p. m. Preliminary at 7:15 between Catholic U. Frosh and Second Staff Squadron of Bolling Field. C. U. gym, at Michigan Avenue at Seventh Street Northeast, can be reached by bus and streetcar.

Georgetown, with 10 victories in 12 starts, will be favored over the Cadets who have lost 2 out of 3. The Hoyas, hoping to merit a Madison Square Garden tournament bid, will be anxious to make a good showing at The Point.

George Washington will present the most improved club in town as it seeks to maintain its place at the top of the Southern Conference standings with the only unbeaten club. In succession the Colonials won over Duke, North Carolina U., N. C. Pre-Flight, Virginia and Army, with four of the five games on the road. For the season Coach Art Zahn's club has won seven and lost three.

Jim Rausch, who broke into the G. W. line-up last year when Ed Gustafson broke his foot, has been setting the scoring pace for the well-rounded, starless club while Gustafson's improved play has been a major factor in the winning streak. G. W.'s old reliable, Joe Gallagher, has directed the play in near-flawless fashion while the biggest player on the squad, 6-foot-6 Don McNary, has suddenly developed into a valuable cog in the G. W. attack and with Jim Myers, John Koniczewski and Bob Groetzinger gives Zahn seven dependable players.

Seal's Basket Gives Friends 31-29 Victory

Though out in front most of the way, Sidwell-Friends School five needed Al Seal's long shot in the last minute of play to down Landon, 31-29, in an Interstate Academic Conference clash yesterday at the winners' court.

Seal's toss gave him his only points of the game as Fred Buschmeyer, guard, led the scoring with 20 points. Walker and Leftus, with 12 and 9 points respectively, were best for the losers.

After one period Friends was clinging to a 6-4 edge and it improved somewhat to make it 12-8 at the half. Going into the final session, the hosts still led, 20-16, but Landon put on a fast rally to tie it up. Walker's two charity shots deadlocked the count at 29-all, after which Seal put on the clincher.

It was Friends' second triumph in the I. A. C. and Landon's first loss.

Bethesda-C. C. 20-17 Winner Over Blair

Bethesda-Chevy Chase, a prohibitive pre-game favorite, had to go all out last night at Blair gym to eke out a 20-17 victory over a fighting Montgomery-Blair five before a turnaway crowd of 500.

Although held to four field goals, the Blairmen converted consistently from the free throw line to stay always within hailing distance of their county high school rivals. Bethesda-C. C., meanwhile, with Johnny Slaughter leading the way with nine points, counted nine double-deckers.

Nip and tuck throughout the first half, Bethesda managed to workout a 10-8 lead at intermission and could only improve this margin by a single point during the hectic second half.

IAAF Approves 38 New Track and Field Records

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, Jan. 22.—The International Amateur Athletic Federation, working under wartime handicaps, approved 38 world track and field records in 1942, 10 established by athletes from the United States.

The sensation of the year was Gunder Haegg, 24-year-old Swedish fireman, who hun up 11 new marks at distances from one mile to 5000 meters. Some of the new standards were improvements on his previous world record times, but he closed out the year in possession of the following international marks: mile, 4:04.6; 1500 meters, 3:45.8; 2000 meters, 5:11.8; 3000 meters, 8:01.2 and 5000 meters, 13:58.2.

Up to Date on Records

Secretary Bo Ekelund, who with President J. S. Edstrom is keeping the federation active even thought it has been impossible to hold representative meetings, said today the organization is up to date on world records although the slowness of communications makes the job difficult. Both men are Swedes.

(In New York, Secretary Dan Ferris of the Amateur Athletic Union pointed out that records made in the United States in 1942 and approved by the A. A. U. last December had not had time to reach the I. A. A. F.)

Wolcott, Klemmer Boast Records

Fred Wolcott, former Rice Institute hurdler, and Grover Klemmer of the San Francisco Olympic Club are each credited with two of the standards set by Americans. Wolcott's marks are 22.5 seconds for the 220-yard low hurdles and 22.3 for the 200-meter lows. Klemmer's records are 46 seconds flat for 400 meters and 46.4 for 440 yards, the latter equaling Ben Eastman's international record.

Les Steers' high jump of 6 ft. 11 in. goes into the books, as does Cornelius Warmerdam's pole vault mark of 15 ft. 5¾ in. Warmerdam, however, has since raised the vault ceiling to 15 ft. 7¾ in. Harold Davis' 10.2 for 100 meters, tying Jesse Owens' world mark, also was recognized along with two relay records made by University of California quartets—3:09.4 for the mile and 7:34.5 for 2 miles. Archie Harris' discus throw of 174 ft. 8¾ in. also was approved, but it will not get into the books because Adolfo Consolini of Italy later boosted the distance to 174 ft. 10¾ in.

Yankees Buy Etten to Fill First-Base Gap

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 22.—The New York Yankees moved today to fill their gap at first base by obtaining Big Nick Etten from Philadelphia Phils for an undisclosed amount of cash and two players from their Kansas City farm in the American Association—Pitcher Allen Gettel and First Baseman Ed Whitnet Levy.

Etten, a left-handed power hitter who batted .311 for the Phils in 1941 but subsided to a .265 pace last season, will take the spot left by Buddy Hassett's entry into military service.

He is 28 years old and has been in professional baseball since 1933, most of the time in the minor leagues although he was with the Philadelphia Athletics during part of the 1938 and 1939 seasons.

Gettel is a right-handed pitcher who won 12 and lost 11 last year for Kansas City. He had been in the Yankee organization for three or four years.

Savold Kayoes Bolden in Third

Chicago, Jan. 22 (AP)—Lee Savold, Paterson, N. J., heavyweight, knocked out Nate Bolden, of Chicago in the third round of their scheduled 10-round battle in the Chicago Stadium tonight after flooring Bolden twice.

Bolden, outweighed 22 pounds and a head shorter, fought gamely until he was clipped with ripping lefts to the body. Bolden won the first round, but the heavier and harder hitting Savold began to get the range in the second.

Maryland's 'T' Expert Awaits Word

Clark Shaughnessy, University of Maryland football coach and exponent of the famed T-formation, yesterday admitted he was headed for the University of Pittsburg as grid mentor if "Pitt makes an offer so attractive I cannot refuse."

The report emanated from Pittsburgh yesterday after it was announced that Charley Bowser, Pitt grid coach, had applied for a Navy commission.

Shaughnessy said yesterday he had been approached 10 days or two weeks ago by Pitt officials "in a general way" but expressed surprise yesterday when informed that Associated Press reports from Pittsburgh said negotiations would be completed in 48 hours.

Approached by Pitt Officials

Said Shaughnessy:

"Pitt officials approached me 10 days or two weeks ago in a general way, but nothing definite, to my knowledge, has been decided at present.

"They asked me then if I would be interested in taking over as football coach. I told them naturally anyone would be interested in a proposition that would be for their betterment. They asked me if I would consider an offer. I told them to go ahead and make one but I told them that I was very happy at Maryland and considered it an up and coming football school. I told them that Dr. Byrd (H. C. "Curly" Byrd, president of the University of Maryland) was one of the finest men I had ever met and a great university president and that it would have to be an outstanding offer before I would accept.

"I haven't seen Dr. Byrd as yet and I would really hate to leave Maryland. But, if Pitt makes an offer so inducing that I cannot refuse what else can I do?

Must Be an Attractive Offer

"If Pittsburgh reports say negotiations will be complete in 48 hours, that's up to them.

"It will have to be an unusual offer to make me leave Maryland."

Shaughnessy, in his one year at the Old Line institution, took a much defeated 1941 team, installed the same type of play that carried Stanford to the Rose Bowl after the 1940 season, and won seven games and lost two, one of the finest pieces of football coaching bits in the country, grid critics declare. Victories were scored over Florida, Virginia, Washington and Lee and Rutgers among others and losses sustained by V. M. I. and Duke.

Shaughnessy said he has no contract at Maryland and is considered a member of the faculty. Under his agreement, he cannot be fired. He said the same situation doubtless would be included in the Pitt contract.

Before taking over as head coach at Stanford in 1940 and 1941, Shaughnessy was coach at Chicago University before football was deemphasized and he left. Prior, he coached at Loyola of New Orleans and Tulane and was a star tackle at Minnesota. At Chicago, he and George Halas, owner and former coach of the Chicago Bears before going to the Navy as a lieutenant commander, collaborated in inventing the T-formation. Both Shaughnessy and Halas insist on giving the other the majority of the credit for its workings.

Petworth A. C. Note

Petworth A. C. basketers, who will meet the Quantico Marines tonight at 8:30, have been asked to report at Union Station at 6:15 for transportation to the game.

Little Hoyas Beaten, 48-15, By Gonzaga

Nine players contributed to the winning total yesterday as Gonzaga High, taking its eighth basketball victory in 10 starts this season, swept over Georgetown Prep at the Garrett Park gym, 48-15. The game was the first in the local Catholic Prep League.

For one half the Little Hoyas, who were dropping their seventh straight contest, made a game of it. They were behind only 16-10 at halftime. In the third period, however, Gonzaga put on a drive that settled the issue conclusively. Thirteen players saw action for the Purple.

Topping scorer was the victors' Frank Cantrel, who tossed in six field goals and a foul shot. His forward mates, Coakley and Collitan, helped out with nine and eight respectively.

Star Amateur Bouts Slated Next Friday

An all-star amateur boxing show of 10 bouts designated as one of a series of tune-ups for the annual District A. A. U. boxing tournament, which gets under way February 12 at Turner's Arena, is scheduled for next Friday night at the Central Branch Boys' Club, Third and C Streets Northwest.

Featuring four recently crowned Golden Glove champions, including Lew Pavone, senior middleweight champ; Al Wankowicz, who upset the dope to whip Red Vernon for the 147-pound title; Dick Mullen, 126-pound titleholder, and Boyd Sondheimer, novice lightweight champ, the bouts will feature youngsters who have signified their intentions of entering the District amateur title events.

Billy Blake, hard working A. A. U. boxing committee chairman, is already making plans for what is believed to be a record entry list for the tournament. He is also personally designing individual prizes and confidently expects to raise enough money through the tournament to take winners to the National A. A. U. tournament in Boston.

Feature bout on the card next Friday will see Lew Pavone meeting Edsel Martz of the Eastern Branch Boys' Club, whom he nosed out for the Golden Glove title recently.

Local Skaters Get Whirl At Professional Tryouts

'Ice-Capades' Auditions Amateurs Thursday; Mrs. Roosevelt to Open Festival Programs; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THERE IS at least some balm in Gilead for the gay young blades and bladettes who have been stamping their feet, biting their fingernails, gnashing their teeth and otherwise registering pettishness and perturbation that the reflecting pool, estuaries, fish ponds and bird baths of the District are not frozen over to the point of bearing the human weight.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

Next Thursday afternoon in Uline's Arena at 2 o'clock by all the chronometers set to E. W. T., local skaters will be given a chance to qualify for the "Ice-Capades of 1943" at an "audition" to be presided over by Norman Frescott, the discerning major domo of the troupe now packin' 'em in over at Third and M Northeast.

The veteran Frescott has announced that Washington talent desirous of a trial will receive every consideration and is confident that the results of a similar tryout held in Boston recently will be exceeded here. Out of 43 rinksters in the Hub, nine made good and were enrolled on the "Ice-Capades" roster.

As things stand —or maybe sit down—at present, Mickey Wendell and Arline Smith are the Capital's only representatives in this kaleidoscopic carnival of steel-bladed skill and grace. Miss Wendell, a former Washington secretary, is prominent among the "Ice-Ca-Pets" and Miss Smith enacts the role of "Miss Victory" in the "Design for Victory" number. After Thursday they probably will have a considerable number of fellow-townsmen to keep them company.

Incidentally, all existing attendance records for the "Ice-Capades" in their local engagements are being shattered over at Uline's. The refrigerated spectacle has "caught on" as never before, despite the dislocation of private transportation facilities. Getting to Uline's and back, a comparatively simple business, has become as much part of the fun of attending as the extraordinary performances of such as Vera Hruba, Donna Atwood, Joe Jackson, jr., and all the other "champs" with whom they are associated—110 of them in all.

Another Miniature Musical On Way

What with "Best Foot Forward's" clicking solidly at Loew's Capitol and Managing Director Gene Ford's sentimental attachment to this form of tuneful tabloid entertainment, another telescoped musical revue will be coming along to the same stage the week of February 11. This time it will be "Earl Carroll's Vanities," always one of the than-whichest of the "girl shows." The cast this time around will be headed by Willie, West and McGinty, pantomimic favorites from time immemorial, and will include Galli Galli, the Oriental magician; Rolly Rolls, Frances Urben, Betty Leonard, the Carrollieres, whoever and whatever they are; the Stroud Twins and, as goes without saying, the "most beautiful girls in the world."

No longer ago than last Monday we were speaking of a United Nations Film Festival that was to be inaugurated by the joint forces of the USO-Jewish Welfare Board and the Jewish Community Center. Remember? Well, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be the honored guest speaker at the first of the programs, dedicated to Great Britain, on Wednesday evening, January 27, at 8:30 o'clock at the Jewish Community Center. The feature film to be shown will be Alfred Hitchcock's "The Lady Vanishes," with Margaret Lockwood, Michael Redgrave and Dame May Whitty heading the cast. Each of the ensuing 10 programs, all to be given on Wednesday nights, will be dedicated to one of the United Nations allied with the United States in the pursuit of the war. Primarily designed for the entertainment of servicemen and warworkers, the public will be welcome only after the men in uniform and their civilian coworkers have been accommodated.

Manager Roland Robbins of the Trans-Lux Theater is smiling from ear to ther over the fine record his house made in the "United Nations Week" collections for the succor of the countries allied in fighting the Axis. With a seating capacity of only 600, the Trans-Lux turned in a nice total of $3,340.13—which ain't what usually comes in bales!

Dots and Dashes

Speaking of the Jewish Community Center, the Marionettes Guild is sending "The Prince and the Pauper" and "Boy Knight of Reims" down to Cafritz Auditorium for a single performance tomorrow afternoon at 4, direct from a year's run in New York . . . By virtue of a trick setting that can be removed instantaneously, the Marionette Guild not only presents its puppet plays, but suddenly reveals the whole "works" behind the scenes . . . According to wire reports finding their way to this desk, Capt. Harry E. Jackson, former deputy Secretary of State for New Hampshire, has revealed that he performed the secret marriage of Madeleine Carroll and Stirling Hayden . . . Would not disclose the actual date, beyond saying that reports that the ceremony had been solemnized in March of 1942 "were not far wrong." . . . Also that "Miss Carroll was traditionally nervous and as for Mr. Hayden, he had a plain case of jitters" . . . "The Navy and the Nation," latest March of Time release, will be on the bill with "The Black Swan" when it opens at the Palace . . . And Preston Sturges' "Palm Beach Story," with Claudette Colbert, Joel McCrea, Rudy Vallee and Mary Astor, will be moving onto the Capitol screen February 4.

Very-Little-Cream-and-No-Sugar Note

You can remember that last date by your coffee coupon!

Palace

Those spurs that "Jingle, Jangle Jingle" are used to great advantage by Paulette Goddard as she figuratively sinks them into pert Susan Hayward when the two come to blows, impelled by that green-eyed monster, jealousy. All this while Fred MacMurray calmly goes about his business of dousing the fires that are responsible for ravaging some of our most valuable and scenic forest lands.

Filmed in Technicolor, "Forest Rangers" is keeping the patrons of Loew's Palace happy for a second week with its pleasant mixture of music, comedy and melodrama. Supporting the leading players are such reliable stand-bys as Lynne Overman, Eugene Pallette and Albert Dekker.

Columbia

You can't keep a good man down, nor a good ship either, for that matter, is the adage whose truth is proven in a way calculated to provide an engrossing dramatic interlude at the Columbia Theater. "Stand By For Action" is a rousing tribute to the fighting personnel of the United States Navy and the sea craft that protect our shores.

Featuring Brian Donlevy, Charles Laughton and Robert Taylor, the film tells the story of the recommissioned U. S. S. Warren and its heroic deeds in the present conflict. Any implausibility which may seem to occur in the unfolding narration is contradicted by the factual basis for the plot. The supporting players are Walter Brennan, Henry O'Neil and Marta Linden.

Cute Switch, Eh?

Claude Rains ate an apple a day during production of Warner Bros.' "Now, Voyager." He played the part of a doctor.

Earle

Having broken all attendance records, with the single exception of those set up by "Forty-second Street," which had the advantage of public holidays, 'way back there in 1933 when President Roosevelt was inaugurated for the first time, "Road to Morocco," this morning winds into its second overflow week at the Earle Theater. It was hailed on this page days before its opening as that kind of a picture.

With Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour at the peak of their comic and vocal effectiveness, this Paramount salute to the Nation's hunger for laughter is the sort of comedy that only comes along once in what is technically described as a blue moon. Utterly nonsensical, it still is sufficiently sane to drive you crazy with fun!

In addition to the stars, Anthony Quinn, Dona Drake and an army of other accomplished buffoons keep the lunacy barging along at top speed from first shipwreck to last. Even a few of the camels take part in the dialogue and "Aunt Lucy" counsels all concerned from the shadowy precincts of the Great Beyond.

Plot? Yes, there is a plot, of a sort, but nobody ever gives it much of a thought buried as it is under all those gorgeous gags, lilting songs and picturesque Oriental embellishments. The only really formidable aspect of the whole thing is trying to get in!

The stage bill and auxiliary screen feature are being carried over intact with the major hilarity.

TYRONE POWER

as he will be seen in the stellar male role in the Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of Rafael Sabatini's "The Black Swan," scheduled to follow the current "Forest Rangers" on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Costarred in the swashbuckling adventure-romance is Maureen O'Hara, one of the cinema's more decorative players

HEDDA HOPPER

A Couple of Softies!

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 22.—Humphrey Bogart and Brian Donlevy are heels and gangsters on the screen, but in real life they're a couple of softies. Reason they've switched parts and Bogey is going to play "Sahara" is because the Donlevy baby is expected any moment, and Brian didn't want to be stuck out in the California desert while that event was taking place. Bogey said, "Sure, I'll take over your job. What does it matter whose camera I make faces at—so long as I make faces?" So Donlevy gets "My Client Curley" with Rita Hayworth. Rita's now scared that the caterpillar will steal the show . . . Just after William Saroyan left Metro he dashed off a vitriolic play called "Get Away, Old Man." 'Tis rumored it's the life of Louis B. Mayer. I hear George Jessel wants to do it on Broadway . . . Now it comes out. David Selznick's hurried trip to New York wasn't to negotiate the making of "Mein Kampf," but to beg, borrow, or sign up any way he could the life story of Eddie Rickenbacker, which so far he hasn't accomplished.

HUMPHREY BOGART

Situation Well in Hand

On Saturday I watched three sailors stop at the street corner to look at Ginger Rogers' picture and read about her marriage. Newsboy, who has a sense of humor, said, "March on, buddies, you've missed the boat. Ginger married a marine." . . . Incidentally, arrangements have been made by Ginger so that she'll be able to do Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army." She runs all thru it and will be the only girl in it . . . Don't believe report that Ann Sothern and Bob Sterling will do a sudden elopement. Ann's divorce from Roger Pryor won't be final for three or four months . . . Clare Boothe Luce still carries on two jobs. No. 1—Congress. And she's putting on the finishing touches of her story, "China" with Jo Swerling, who's back in Washington to be near her.

To Bob—or Not to Bob

Danny Kaye, who's going to make a musical for Goldwyn, refuses to bob, even for Sam. I mean, bob his nose. After many tests, it was suggested he'd be prettier if he did something about his nose. "But it's been good to me," says Kaye, "and, by golly, I'm going to keep it as is." . . . Shuberts are hoping to get Eleanor Powell and Reggie Gardiner's signatures on the dotted line to join their New York "Ziegfeld Follies," which is already in rehearsal with Milton Berle. . . . Few people know that Jean Gabin enlisted, but he'll be able to make "Candle in the Wind" before he joins the Free French in Africa. . . . Stirling Hayden, who's been busy in the merchant marine, wants to join the Marines at San Diego, which means Madeleine will be back. . . . Our town's sympathy goes to Ben Piazza's daughter, Rita, who's expecting her first baby within two months. She just learned her husband was killed in action.

"Lady" and Hesse in Dark

When Mitch Leisen started "Lady in the Dark" he borrowed all of Paul Hesse's photographic machinery, including his camera and special lights. The picture's behind schedule, and Hesse's screaming because he can't go on with his work photographing glamour girls without his equipment . . . The new play, "Nine Girls on Broadway," should make four stars for Columbia—Jeff Donnell, Leslie Brooks, Ann Savage, and Marguerite Chapman. They'll use a star name for the lead, but other parts are made to order for that quartet I've named . . . Eddie Cantor didn't do badly at a ham-and-egg breakfast at the Beverly Hills Hotel when he sold $600,000 worth of bonds for a bomber to be named after our fair city. And Eddie's hoping your cities can match this.

Following the Ball

Now that Bing Crosby's about to move into a cozy little place in Holmby Hills, his golfing pals will be Fred Astaire, Bob Leonard, etc., because he's joined the Bel Air Club, and his house is practically on the first tee. I wonder if this means Bob Hope will buy a house near Crosby's so he won't lose a golfing partner . . . Since Ida Lupino's set for "The Porcelain Lady," "Convoy to Murmansk" has been bought for her. It's about a Russian woman navigator. Which makes the eighth Russian picture announced in one week. The producers would be caught with their priorities down if Russia should up and end the war before we could get its story on the screen. We all know Russia's doing a magnificent job, but if we're not careful we're going to run it into the ground through repetition.

Cinderella Steps Out

At Hollywood Canteen Saturday night there was a special dividend for the soldiers. She was brought out of the kitchen, where she'd been washing dishes. She was Shirley Temple. The boys went nuts over her. She developed into one of the sweetest kids you've ever seen in your life. Our great master minds still can't find a picture story for her. That's why we call them master minds . . . Lillian Hellman at same place, also regulars Kay Kyser, Greer Garson, Rita Hayworth, Marshal Hunt, etc. . . . Warners started something when they bought the life of Bette Davis from a magazine, and will put it on the screen. That's a risky business—parading a star's life in public. Gosh! What if it becomes a universal habit?

Broadway's Pulse Beat

New York, Jan. 22.

William Allen White, the famed editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette, was in N. Y. recently, and discussed the need for small-town newspapers. White stated that the big city papers, even by blanketing the small-town territory, couldn't compete with the readers' wish to know about local events . . . White made a thorough checkup in his own town, where the Kansas City Star is sold. His checkup proved that every Emporia reader of the Kansas City Star also subscribes to the Gazette. "In short," he illustrated, "if a copy of the New York Times could be distributed free to all my readers, I would not lose a single subscriber to the Emporia Gazette."

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD

Last report from Washington was that Elmer Davis would make a weekly broadcast to the Nation over the four hookups. He prefers to make it a five-minute broadcast, similar to the ones he did at C. B. S. A Sunday night program-clearance may be arranged . . . The National Education Association, to which the Nation's leading educators belong, is having a conflict with the Office of Defense Transportation—because the ODT has been urging that its St. Louis convention be canceled for lack of transportation

The newspaper correspondents recently met on Henderson Field in Guadalcanal. The first reporter revealed that he had just written a book about the Marines, and that a publisher had accepted it a few days earlier . . . "A book?" said the second reporter. "Man, don't you realize that history is being made here? How can you write a book about it so quickly? This thing demands perspective, long-range thinking, a full realization of its importance in strategy and the global war. It's just impossible to write a book about it here, while it's still going on" . . . The first was Richard Tregaskis, author of the new "Guadalcanal Diary." The second was Ira Wolfert, author of the new "Battle for the Solomons."

Louis Calhern is returning to Hollywood. He'll appear in Ernest Lubitsch's "Happy Birthday" . . . When Duke Ellington's orchestra appears at Carnegie Hall Saturday night, three musicians who were in Ellington's original five-piece band, 20 years ago, will be with him . . . WNYC's fourth annual American musical Festival will be an important civic event. Deems Taylor, Morton Gould and Virgil Thomson will conduct their own compositions

Robert E. Sherwood and Archibald MacLeish were at a dinner party with Albert D. Lasker, the advertising man. They mentioned to him a series of Government broadcasts they were planning to popularize. Lasker asked them about the Crosley ratings. Sherwood said he was unfamiliar with Crosley ratings—the polls taken by phone calls to radio listeners, to determine the popularity of programs. "I'll send you a copy of the latest Crosley," Lasker promised, and sent a copy to Sherwood, with a note: "Let me know how you feel about it." A few days later Sherwood returned it, with a reply: "I feel heartbroken to see that 'Uncle Walter's Doghouse' has dropped one point."

Any Army camp which needs sketches for its local shows can get a mimeographed collection of vaudeville and burlesque routines by writing to Georgia Sothern at the Music Box Theater . . . The twice-wed matinee idol, Arthur Brown of the Stork Club, is trying to interest a publisher in his book, "What I know About Women." Brown's plan is to have it consist of 250 blank pages.

Alva Johnston has written a Saturday Evening Post series about Alfred Hitchcock, the director. It will be called "300 Pounds of Profit Comes to Hollywood" . . . A Russian officer in Washington complained to William Morris, jr.: "My teeth hurt me. A Moscow dentist drilled them, but I never had the fillings put in." Morris asked: "How long have they been that way—without fillings?" The busy Russian replied: "They were drilled on June 21, 1941"—the day Germany invaded Russia . . . Broadway's newest producer will be Dione Lewis, a young lady who has three plays ready for production. The first one will be presented next month.

A representative of Nation's Business attests to this occurrence in Washington. The agent of an essential war industry heard, indirectly, that there was to be a meeting of the WPB, OPA and Army and Navy officials with certain members of his industry . . . He called the Government executive who was to preside at the meeting, and asked him for the time and place. "Oh, but this meeting is by invitation only," the executive reminded him . . . "I'll be there," said the agent, reaching for his hat and coat. "This isn't an invitation war."

Two pages of Stage and Screen appear in Sunday's Post.

Another Arduous Task

Chief J. W. Just, fire coordinator for Maryland, had just told about the arduous tasks firemen meet when the fire siren sounded at a meeting of Cabin John (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department. Thirty-eight fire laddies piled out. A few minutes later they returned with a dish mop handle. The fire was in a dish mop which had been parked behind an overheated pipe.

Unfinished Business

Fort George G. Meade, Md.—Before Pearl Harbor, Franklin G. Hubbard, a widower, had two sons and a daughter. All three died while in their country's service.

That is the reason Private (First Class) Franklin G. Hubbard is spending extra hours on the rifle range at this Army post.

The Federal Diary

Editor's note: Today and every Saturday Federal employes express their views and comments in this column. Send contributions to Jerry Klutz, editor.

SUGGEST that a type of uniform be designed for women involved in war work, especially civil service employes. Now that we are working 48 hours a week our time for shopping is so limited that the difficulties of maintaining a wardrobe are greatly increased. Realizing that women desire to express personality, I am not necessarily suggesting that the design of this costume be restricted to absolute uniformity, but something along this line would offer many advantages, some of which I am listing below:

1. Saving of time and money to the worker.
2. Offering a psychological advantage to the people who cannot go to war and who are still as truly interested as our armed forces, and who are proud to have other people know that they are in war work.
3. Saving of labor involved in the manufacture or tailoring of the clothing and in the marketing of them.
4. Economy of time in maintaining these clothes and the saving of labor for dry cleaners.
5. Creating a better morale in business offices where there is still considerable competition in "keeping up with the Joneses" working to the serious disadvantage of the employe who has outside demands on her compensation.

ANN M. RODDY.

THE TRANSPORTATION division of the War Department needs 350 typists and stenographers immediately. No previous training is necessary. The jobs will pay $1860, base pay, plus overtime. Call REpublic 6700 and ask for either of these branches: 73679, 72637, and 4973.

I HAVE just got a letter back with a special tag on it and I am seething. It had been carried around for half-dozen signatures. Then, upon reaching the last place, it was sent back by special messenger with a notation that it would go on half a page. It did by the hardest. A stenographer cannot tell exactly from her notes in what space a letter will go. On half a sheet of paper one line may determine whether or not it has to be copied over. I did the letter over and have dropped it in the box. Now it is to be initialed all over again by men whose salaries range from $4000 to $10,000 a year and handled by about six clerks and two or three messengers.

I felt like hanging a tag on it exclaiming "Remember Pearl Harbor!" I wonder how many manhours were consumed. When boiled down the letter said a polite "No." That is all. If this were the first offense I would not be writing this. It happens several thousand times a day in the Government.

I do not intend to quarrel about my pay. My salary is sufficient for my needs and it is certainly worth more than the work that I do. I do not mean to say that I do not have enough work to do. In fact, I have the work of more than one person heaped upon my desk. But I do question the value of it.

The Government set-up needs a general going over. I realize this is not easily done; but I'll bet if some competent men were established in each Government agency or department to eliminate unnecesary work Washington would not be an overcrowded city.

STENO.

WE, THE FIREMEN at the Naval Air Station in Anacostia, believe we're being discriminated against. We can't understand the system of paying Navy employes. Our base salaries are $1620 and up until recently we were paid for overtime work. The Navy now has ruled that we can't be paid for overtime work. Instead, we're being given a 10 per cent increase which means a cut in salary. We risk our lives daily in our work. Our quarters are cold. We work overtime without additional pay. The Navy pays a chauffeur more than it pays a fireman.

FIREMAN.

THE INTERVIEWING unit at the Civil Service Commission is the biggest joke in Washington. I was told this unit could arrange to a transfer for me. I filed an application and I was told I would hear from it in a few days. When I heard nothing I called to be told that my application had been lost. I filed another application and it, too, was lost. And, believe it or not, I filed a third one and it was also lost.

I'm a man of great patience—I've worked in the Federal service for 15 years—and I filed a fourth application. After much shuffling of papers I was informed by a young lady in the office that I was eligible to transfer to a job I had in mind. I asked when it could be arranged and she answered: "Oh, we don't do anything about that. We just card your application and hold it. If you want to job why don't you go to the agency and apply for it." Now I've lost all control over my patience.

Leary Acts To Expedite Doctors' Gas

OPA Administrator Also Lightens Ban On Movie Stars Here For Birthday Fete

Movie stars and doctors were recognized by the OPA last night as being not quite like other people when it comes to gasoline rationing.

In orders released simultaneously, District OPA Administrator Whitney Leary instructed ration boards to segregate physicians' petitions for supplemental gas rations in order to get them through the mill as fast as possible; and ruled that celebrities here for the President's Birthday may go from hotel to hotel on A books.

Leary's ruling, made upon advice of William R. Koerner of the national OPA legal division, was that the Hollywood contingent will be "performing work which contributes to the public welfare or to the war effort and therefore may be regarded as performing an occupation as that term is defined in the gasoline rationing regulations."

More Hearings Held

Meanwhile either the public cooperation or the difficulty of making a case against pleasure driving was being demonstrated at the three ration boards that held hearings last night. Of 21 reported violators, 20 were dismissed and one man was given a week to produce evidence that his wife worked at the Munsey Building and was indeed there and not attending the National Theater the night the car was spotted parked on E Street.

The dismissed cases all involved mistaken identity or errands that were far more innocent than the spotters suspected, board chairmen reported.

"The public is obeying the regulation for the most part and the drive against the small percentage of violators will be continued," Leary said, denying reports that the OPA was overhauling its machinery for handling pleasure driving cases.

The legal department will continue to investigate reported violations before turning them over to the ration boards, "so as not to harass the public too much," Leary said.

Officials Cited

While the boards were turning down the reported violations, Representative Rees (Republican) of Kansas demanded "a little cracking down on useless driving by Government officials and bureaucrats."

Rees estimated that officials of Federal departments exclusive of the War and Navy Departments, had traveled 673,000 miles in the last month, or 27 times the mileage around the world. Rees got his figures from the Treasury Department procurement division records, which show a gasoline consumption of 44,868 gallons in December, 15 per cent more than in the same period last year.

"Of course we want to save gas and rubber," Rees said. "But why not begin at home?"

Meanwhile, gasoline ration coupon No. 4 became valid yesterday after the Number 3 coupon had expired Thursday night.

The Number 4 coupon, like the now expired Number 3, is good for only three gallons of gasoline in the East and for four gallons in the West.

Rationing officials said the change from the three to four made little difference to the average motorist for the ban on pleasure driving did not permit him to use all of his coupons anyway.

D. C. Girl Helps 3 Brothers at War By Buying Bonds

GIBLIN

A twofold contributor to the war effort is red-headed Mary Giblin of 1650 Harvard Street Northwest, who invests more than 20 per cent of her salary as a vitally needed senior statistical clerk in the Labor Department in war bonds.

Mary comments that the most she can invest in war bonds is the least she can do to back up her three brothers, all members of the armed forces: Robert Giblin, an ensign in the dive-bomber forces of the Navy Air Corps, now in service in the South Pacific; Eugene, in a Navy Air Air Corps base training camp, and 17-year-old Thomas, a corporal with the Marines.

Despite her generous contribution through the payroll savings plan, Mary has no budget worries. She shares an apartment with three other girls, makes her own clothes, devotes her leisure time to athletic pursuits.

The captain saw his son for the first time January 19, as the boy was born after Mrs. Gildart came home in September. The captain is the son of Mrs. Beatrice A. Gildart of the Delano Apartments, 2745 Twenty-ninth Street Northwest

Civil Service Job Floaters Are Criticized

Civil Service Commission "proganda," used to recruit thousands of new employes for mushrooming Federal payrolls, was severely criticized in the House yesterday by Representative Lanham (Democrat) of Texas.

He urged that these recruiting methods be examined by the House Civil Service Committee in its probe of United States personnel practices, authorized by the House yesterday.

Lanham read into the Record a mimeographed circular, which he said had been distributed throughout the Tenth Civil Service Region of New Orleans, and had probably been sent throughout the country from other offices.

Headed "A Telegram for Mr. and Mrs. America!" the circular read:

"Federal agencies must find stenographers and typists to fill thousands of vacancies. Situation critical. War program suffers delay. Will you inform girls 17½ years old and up that they will receive immediate appointment upon passing Civil Service test? Salaries hiked to $146 and $164 a month. Apply any first or second class postoffice."

"For those of us who see Washington thronged with employes," Lanham declared, "and hear reports that many of them don't have anything to do half the time, it is discouraging and disconcerting to see the Civil Service Commission putting out this kind of material."

He asked that it be considered "food for thought and action" by the Ramspeck investigators.

"Mothers and fathers should think twice before letting 17½-year-old girls come up here to work," he told reporters afterward. "If they've got anything to do at home, they ought to stay there."

Dry Council Asks Congress Liquor Action

In protest against advertising of alcoholic beverages and "the apparent disinclination of the Federal Government to curtail the highly detrimental liquor trade," the National Temperance and Prohibition Council has passed resolutions urging Congress to take action immediately to minimize the evils of liquor and vice, it was announced yesterday.

Holding its annual meeting in the Methodist Building here, the council stated that when the voluntary cooperation of the public necessary for the lessening of manufacture and consumption of alcohol was not forthcoming, the Government must intervene "if we are to survive under our democratic system." Particular issue was taken by the council with the enlargement of the advertising campaigns of the liquor interests "in a time of national peril." This intensive advertising, it was said, has resulted in an unprecedented increase in the consumption of alcoholic liquors, which threatens among other major things, "a complete breakdown in the morale of the people, and directly that of the juvenile groups."

Adopted by the council was a resolution asking that Congress pass legislation extending protection to the armed forces against liquor evils, and another urging Congress to empower the President to establish zones around mines and factories in which it would be illegal to sell liquor.

G. O. P. Fills List for D. C. Committee

The House Republican Conference yesterday approved a full minority slate of nine members for the House District Committee, adding one more man to the roster of eight announced by the party Committee on Committees Thursday.

The ninth member will be Representative Edward G. Rohrbough of West Virginia a first-termer.

An educator and bank president, Rohrbough was serving as chairman of his county rationing board before he was elected to Congress.

Commencement of the committee's operations are being held up by an incomplete roster of majority members. The House officially confirmed a slate of eight men nominated by the Democratic caucus, but this leaves four majority vacancies to be filled with the strong possibility that a replacement may also have to be found for Representative Feighan of Ohio, who reportedly intends to resign.

Hearing Asked On Rutledge Court Choice

A Senate Judiciary Subcommittee is expected to decide over the weekend whether to report on the nomination of Justice Wiley B. Rutledge to the United States Supreme Court without taking testimony, or whether a series of public hearings should be held.

The subcommittee met yesterday to consider requests from two Washingtonians that they be allowed to testify in opposition to Rutledge's appointment. The two would-be witnesses are John T. Risher of 227 Florida Avenue Northwest, and Edmond C. Fletcher, local lawyer.

Fletcher told Chairman O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming that he wanted an opportunity to question the nominee before the subcommittee in order to demonstrate a "lack of judicial integrity." He later said that his opposition stemmed from an opinion Rutledge rendered in a case before the District Court of Appeals in which Fletcher was involved.

More Drastic Jaywalking Law Urged

Other Traffic Safety Measures Also Are Proposed to D. C. Commissioners

Harsher regulations against jaywalking were proposed to the Commissioners yesterday as part of a three-point program to curtail pedestrian casualties, recommended in a conference called to promote pedestrian safety."

An increase in the safety education allotment to $30,000, and a mass safety meeting were the other proposals submitted to the Commissioners by District traffic officials, representatives from the Traffic Advisory Council and Senators Burton and McCarran of the Senate District Committee.

The new regulation would make it illegal to cross a signal controlled street except at regular crosswalks or to and from streetcar loading platforms. At present it is permissible to cross the street in the middle of the block if traffic conditions do not make it hazardous.

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the Traffic Advisory Council's subcommittee on enforcement, objected to the proposed regulation, suggesting instead that police be instructed to "put the heat on" enforcing present regulations. He advocated using auxiliary police, now limited by the Commissioners to strictly air-raid test duties, for enforcing the present law. He pointed out that only one arrest had been made under this regulation in the past year.

As a prologue to the suggested traffic mass meeting, the conferees asked the Commissioners to request of citizens associations that one entire meeting of each organization be given over to discussion of traffic problems.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer reported that accidents had declined 27 per cent from last year, but that deaths had increased 14 per cent and pedestrian deaths 13 per cent. Streetcar deaths had increased 13 per cent, to 21 in 1942, and bus accident casualties had risen from 3 to 8.

In a discussion of the 79 pedestrian deaths in 1942, it was agreed that at least 52 of them were caused by violating the jay-walking ban. Chairman McCarran asked the maximum penalty that could be invoked by law for jaywalking and was told it was a $300 fine. McCarran said the maximum penalty was, obviously, death.

Victory Sidelights

More Duty For Auxiliary Police Asked

Immediate steps should be taken to authorize auxiliary policemen to perform the duties of police officers on a volunteer basis, the Southeast Businessmen's Association urged yesterday in a letter to Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee.

Further, the association stated, the auxiliary police, numbering about 3500, should get hospitalization for injuries received in line of duty; all benefits, except pay, now enjoyed by members of the Metropolitan Police Force, and needed adequate equipment.

Junior Red Cross To Aid Senior Unit

Junior Red Cross girls from District High Schools will soon assist th District Red Cross Motor Corps and accompany the mobile canteens on their daily rounds to the military posts in the District and vicinity, it was announced by the District Red Cross yesterday. Today a group of teen-age girls will start a 70-hour course in canteen at the Walsh House kitchens, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue. The class will be conducted every Saturday morning from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Capital Transit Employes Give Blood

Responding to an appeal for new donors to help the District American Red Cross reach its greatly increased quota of 500 blood donations per day set by the Army and Navy, 24 employes of the Capital Transit Co. appeared at 11 a. m. yesterday to make their initial donation. At the same time it was announced that a new group of 21 would make their first donation on Monday.

St. John's Opens Warden's Classes

The National Society of Colonial Dames has formed a surgical dressing unit, one of several meeting at the Dumbarton House, 2715 Q Street Northwest, Mrs. Brown Harbold, chairman of surgical dressings for the District Red Cross, announced yesterday. Any Georgetown resident may join the Dumbarton unit, which meets daily, 9:30 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Mason Hits Delay in D.C. Health Plan

Dr. Parran Denies His Bureau Halted Lanham Act Funds For Local Projects

By Roger Young
Post Staff Writer

Blazing with indignation, Commissioner Guy Mason last night denounced the United States Public Health Service for impeding the District's efforts to enlarge its health program with Lanham Act funds appropriated for wartime emergencies.

A flat denial, however, that the Public Health Service was blocking the release of the funds was made to The Post by Surgeon General Thomas Parran. Dr. Parran said that on December 14 (months after the Health Service had received the Commissioners' request) the Budget Bureau had ruled that Lanham Act funds "were not to be used to supplement activities of the District Health Department which the Public Health Service already had authority by law to supplement."

Agreement Pending

Dr. Parran said that the Federal Security Agency and the Federal Works Agency had been instructed to submit to the Budget Bureau a joint agreement as to the types of public health projects which should be carried out under the Lanham Act and those that should be financed by Public Health Service funds. When this agreement is signed—which Parran believes will be within the next few days—the Public Health Service "will be in a position to recommend to the Bureau of the Budget that it approve all or such part of the $400,000 request by the District Health Department for which there may be imperative immediate need."

Dr. Parran spoke strongly of the need for new hospital beds, which, however, were not items in the $256,744 in question.

An editorial in yesterday's Post first informed the Commissioners of the action of the Public Health Service in holding up approval of $256,744 sought to fit the District's health facilities to the emergency needs created by the war, Mason said.

"The old shell game" was one of the milder epithets that the Commissioner hurled at the agency that for five months has withheld formal approval of funds already appropriated for additional facilities admitted even by the Public Health Service to be imperative.

Humiliated by the cavalier treatment he felt the request had received from Public Health authorities, and concerned with the dangers that an epidemic would offer because of the withholding of funds, Mason concluded his scorching remarks on the Federal policy by saying: "I make these statements advisedly and with much chagrin; I understand now what bureaucracy means."

So far as Mason could gather, the Health Service "has or will deny the petition for the $256,744 on grounds that these funds could be obtained from some other and unknown source.

"The Public Health Service knows, or should know, that the funds may be obtained by the Commissioners only by congressional appropriation, and it knows, or should know, that Congress has made no such appropriation," Mason said.

Funds Expressly Omitted

Mr. Mason pointed out that these funds were expressly not included in the 1942-43 budget because of the assurance that they would be forthcoming from the Lanham Act appropriations. The Public Health Service was quite aware of this when it held up or disapproved the District request, he charged. Doling out of funds from the Health Service appropriation would not be acceptable, he indicated.

The money was intended to meet the expenses from December 1, 1942, to next July 1 for the hospital permit bureau, the bureau of vital statistics, maternal and child welfare, housekeeping aides, medical inspections in schools, mental hygiene, public nursing, food inspections, sanitation, water and malaria control, rodent control, health centers, maternity nurses and midwives and clerical work in the tuberculosis sanitaria.

All of these projects are usually included in the regular Health Department budget, and the extraordinary demands of the war effort have cerated a burden that the Lanham Act was specifically passed to relieve.

"Commencing in 1941, the Commissioners have made applications for Lanham Act funds in the aggregate of 10 million dollars," the disgusted Commissioner said. "These appropriations embrace various types of projects, all necessitated by the war. Of these total appropriations, six million dollars has been allocated and the projects thereunder have been worked up to the point where construction or opening of facilities could begin.

"Of this six million dollars, less than $900,000 worth of projects are under construction. The efforts of the Commissioners to obtain clearance on the balance of the projects have been stymied by the WPB and the Public Health Service—the former with some justification, the latter with none."

Lack of Men Cripples Bus, Trolley Service

A four-man committee will be appointed by the local War Transportation Committee to discuss the critical shortage of manpower in the Washington transportation system with William E. Leahy, District Selective Service chief, it was learned yesterday.

E. D. Merrill, Capital Transit Co. president; Arthur J. Sundlun, President of the Merchants & Manufacturers Association; P. Y. K. Howat of the Board of Trade, and W. A. Van Duser, chairman of the War Transportation Committee, will comprise the new subcommittee to be formed as a result of a conference held Thursday.

Milton Diehl of the Office of Defense Transportation, said that the manpower situation in the District, Virginia and Maryland transportation system was critical.

Van Duzer said:

"We want to keep the transportation system going here in Washington and I think it is awfully serious when 200 buses are idle because there are not enough men to operate them.

The suggestion was made Thursday that a blanket draft deferment be sought for all Capital Transit Co. motormen and mechanics. But the Selective Service Act specifically prohibits blanket deferments of "individuals by occupational groups or groups of individuals in any plant or institution."

In the manpower bulletin relating to transportation as an essential activity responsibility is left up to local boards with the directive that consideration be given bus and streetcar operators.

Merrill stated yesterday that 600 additional men were needed by Capital Transit to maintain the service it was attempting to give. He said 1181 men left last year.

'China-Minded' Jayne Cotter Says It Can't Be Defeated

Ingenue of Current Production Hopes To Make Name Some Day in Chinese Role

By Peggy Preston

After her week's run here as the ingenue of "Spring Again," Jayne Cotter's social and histrionic background has become pretty much a matter of public knowledge. What most people don't know about this lovely-to-behold young actress, is that she was born in China, lived there through a part of the civil war and that she is thoroughly "China-minded."

"No one is going to defeat China, now or at any other time," she maintains with the positive manner of the enthusiast. "China will defeat Japan, and she will do it at least 60 per cent on her own power."

Such crisp, decided statements, Miss Cotter is ready to back up with a display of a thorough knowledge of the political, cultural and sociological background of the country. Most of this, she admits she learned through her father, the Rev. F. J. Cotter, who for 13 years was head of St. Andrew's Church in Wuchang, China, and taught sociology and religion at the Yale University in China.

But much of her intensity of feelings come from her devotion to the memories of her own life there. In the city of Wuchang, the Cotters were the only white family. They spoke Chinese, and until she was 8 or 9, her only playmates were Chinese children.

"I know that China can never be conquered," she goes on, "because whoever goes into the country is assimilated in spite of himself. China may never have won a war, but it has never lost one. It goes on and always will in spite of the invaders who have from time to time sought to make it their own."

Having been bombed out of their home in southern China, the Cotter family returned to America in 1929 and settled down in Connecticut, where their father became pastor of an Episcopal church in Sharon.

The excitment of their last months in Hangkow and Shanghai, while the northern and southern armies sought each other out on the streets, was replaced by traditional suburban life in a Connecticut town.

Jayne graduated from St. Margaret's School, where among her predecesors were Rosalind Russell and Gene Tierney. Promptly thereafter she went on the stage.

No pounding of pavements was in order for this young miss. For two and a half years she has not missed a single night behind the footlights, and she is always reading and rehearsing one play, while she is still performing in another.

Her prime ambition is to do a Chinese role. "I'm going to do one someday, but I want it to be just right, for I intend to make my reputation by it," she says.

Miss Edwards To Have Post In West Africa

Dakar, West Africa, is the next stop for Miss Irene Edwards of the British Embassy staff.

Miss Edwards, who was sent to Washington by the London Foreign Office last year, will be leaving soon for the Dark Continent and another field job for her government. A familiar sight on local tennis courts, Miss Edwards is a well-known British tennis star. During her stay here she has been often singled out to present sporting trophies or to discuss her favorite sports over the air lanes.

Since her arrival here last January she has made many friends, especially in sporting and diplomatic circles. When she leaves shortly for her new post, she will be another of the friendship casualties in Washington's passing parade.

Steaks, Not Fudge, Demands Bosun Mate of Bride

Former Baseball Pitcher Believes Navy Service Will Not Impair Pitching Skill

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 22.

Mrs. Robert Feller is certain she will be able to cook for her husband although she thinks the appetite of the former Cleveland pitcher is the largest she ever has seen.

"I told him before we were married that no doubt he'd have to live on fudge, cokes and chicken salad," she said, "but already he is asking for steaks."

The Fellers were married at Waukegan, Ill., Saturday evening and are honeymooning on the 10-day furlough granted the 24-year-old bridegroom from his duties as chief boatswain's mate in the United States Navy.

Feller said he had not handled a baseball since last August and did not believe his Naval duties would permit him to do more than "warm up once or twice and do a little running this spring." He was certain, however, that he would return to baseball after the war with all his previous effectiveness.

"I've read somewhere," he said, "that military service develops new muscles and causes different muscular reactions that may ruin the careers of athletes. I don't think that is true in my case. I think I'll be ready to play ball again if I can keep my legs in shape."

And what did the 5-foot-2-inch, 90-pound bride think of the fame won by her 6-foot-1-inch, 191-pound husband?

"Oh, my goodness. I just think of him as Bobby, that's all. He's like a different person when I see his picture in the paper. We first met in 1940 when he came to Florida for spring training and I was attending Rollins College.

"When I saw him I was so surprised. I had always thought all baseball players were old men."

There will be a Scotch comedian and a sword dancer and preceding the talk by Sir Ronald Campbell, British Minister, will come the piping in ceremonies of the Haggis with a procession of bagpipers and kilted guards.

The Gentler Sex

The Bread Cutters

She—Do you want another slice of bread?

He—You mean another hunk?

She—Well, it's the best I could do with this knife.

He—Why didn't you get a regular bread knife?

She—I didn't have time to get downtown. Anyway I asked you——

He—I haven't time to bother with things like that . . . I believe I will have another gob . . . Oh haven't you got it cut?

She—No, it'll dry out if it's cut in advance.

He—You'll never cut any bread hacking that way. You've got to use a sawing motion.

She—I know—but the knife won't saw.

He—Why don't you sharpen it on something . . . like a milk crock?

She—I don't have milk crocks any more.

He—Well, a whetstone.

She—I haven't seen a whetstone in ages.

He—Well you're making too hard work of it. You haven't the right technique.

She—What is the right technique?

He—The whole thing is to have a free and easy motion. You get too excited.

She—I'm not excited. It's this horrible old knife!

He—There you go! It's not so much the knife as the way you use it. Didn't you ever cut bread at home when you were a girl?

She—Say, how far do you think I go!

He—Why, I can remember when we cut bread—say, I remember seeing you cut it! You know, for that school picnic—

She—Well, for heaven's sake don't go around shouting it to everybody!

He—I'm not shouting. You're just excited. Say, let me cut that.

She—No, you'll hack it all up.

He—Well, if I couldn't do better than you—

She—All right then! Just show what you can do! After all, bread cutting's a man's job.

He—Now I'm going to start at the other end and just take it easy like . . . You see, sort of sawing along . . .

She—Don't cut it so thick!

He—Well, you have to have some body to what you're cutting.

She—Anyone could cut hunks like that . . . besides, the knife's not sawing.

He—It will in a minute. The whole trick is not to get excited.

She—Wait! Don't shake the table so! You'll make everything spill.

He—Say, I'm going to get this bread cut or know the reason why!

She—Wait! Wait! The water's all spilling, and the coffee . . .

He—I wouldn't have a knife like this in the house!

She—Wait, please! You'll cut the tablecloth!

He—I tell you I'm going to get this bread cut if it's the last thing I ever do!

She—Oh John! Please! Stop! . . . Oh there it goes! One of my best Haviland plates!

He—I tell you I'm gonna—

She—John, please! You're breaking everything! The neighbors'll think we're having a fight!

He—There you are! . . . Well, I wasn't going to let a loaf of bread lick me.

She—But the bread is all hacked to pieces . . . and my plate broken! And look at the table!

He—It's the doggoned old knife! If I had a sharp knife, I could really cut bread.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

The girls with the well-turned calves and ankles usually have shapely thighs—but only 10 per cent do. That is the same slim percentage who get enough legwork.

If you were a dancer, you would do those side-to-side chorus-line kicks that not only make for lovely legs and thighs but keep the hips trim. For example, there are the Radio City Rockettes.

But the average girl does none of those things. With extreme thinness or even with normal weight the slender muscle along the inner thighline shows the lack of muscle tone in unbecoming hollows. This muscle is used in swinging one leg toward or across the other. It is also brought into action in flexing the knee.

Since your career doesn't provide exercise, you will have to turn to calisthenics for legwork. A few minutes spent in leg swinging with the right technique should be your daily stint—if you expect to have good thighs.

The following exercise gets the thigh muscles coming and going.

Stand erect, hand on chairback for support, flex left knee high up toward chest and with knee point describe circles. Continue for 10 counts, rest, then repeat with right knee flexed.

Now stand erect with weight on one foot, knees straight, and swing other leg from hip in wide circle, up around and down. Swing clockwise 10 counts, rest, then repeat counter-clockwise same number. Perform with other leg.

To smooth hip hump and outside hollow, do this exercise: Stand erect with feet on floor. Now, keping knee straight, raise left foot up and back in a kick from the hip. Repeat 10 times, rest, and perform with other leg.

Dear Bets,

This is it, isn't it? I mean the art work at the top. It looked like you the minute I spotted it. (The clothes and lunch, honey-bun, . . . I don't flatter myself about my likenesses). Seriously though, this is a knock-out! It's gray flannel . . . technically 60% wool, 40% rayon, your favorite fabric. The top is a jerkin with two good big pockets for your glasses and those pencils you keep losing. The skirt has four pleats front and back and is a dead ringer for that slick little number you fell in love with when J. P. lectured you on budgets. How much is this one? Hold on, my girl, we're coming to that.

I was dreamily picturing you in this with your striped shirt or for that matter any one of your prize blouse collection, when the salesgirl threw me one of those is-this-a-trance-or-catalepsy looks, and I left as soon as I could make it. Incidentally the jerkin would make smooth going with your navy suit. All set? O.K. It's all of $6.00 for the works!

Now, will you leave the shopping to your Aunt Hannah after this and stop gulping those hamburgers?

Ring me up and tell me if it got a smile out of the boss. In case you mislaid the number again, it is National 4200, Ext. 324.

Love,
Jeanne Contini

Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor

First to gear its activities to a wartime basis, the adaptable Women's Club of Chevy Chase (Md.), is further streamlining its program. Henceforth, all the activities will be held the first three days of each week instead of strung over a seven-day period. Purpose is to conserve fuel.

An alert, progressive civic organization, the club is a bee hive of war activity. In fact, it has its own Red Cross section under Mrs. Raymond Forney, chairman, which has regular classes in surgical dressings, sewing and knitting. In addition, the club is starting new classes in home nursing and nutrition. In the meantime, members continue to work busily for nearby service camps. They collect magazines and books and make cookies for the soldiers.

The literature section, which usually meets on Friday, will convene Monday instead. A special treat for the husbands of members is the musical section's programs scheduled for Monday night.

Did You Know That . . .?

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn

The declarer on today's hand would have preferred to find one or two more trumps in the dummy. But as it was, he had to play the game contract at hearts with a division of four and three, while the adversary on his right held five.

The hand was played at the winter nationals between the winner and runner-up teams of the open-team-of-four championship. The runners-up had the best of this board, despite the shortage of trumps. S. Garton Churchill of Douglaston, Long Island, and Waldemar von Zedtwitz played the hand at four hearts, and "Church" made it despite East's holding.

At the other table, Charles Goren and John R. Crawford, both of Philadelphia, played the hand at a part score at clubs and went down. The heart suit was never mentioned.

Lee Hazen and Harry J. Fishbein were the other half of the runner-up team. B. Jay Becker and Sidney Silidor of Philadelphia were the partners of Goren and Crawford.

"On our bidding, Waldy had a choice of playing the hand at three no trump (which would probably depend upon a club break) or at four hearts, a 4—3 suit," said Church. "With clubs breaking and the bad division in hearts, no trum would have been better.

"At the other table, Goren played four clubs and, I believe, went down two or three. The heart suit was never mentioned.

"B. Jay opened the diamond ace and continued a diamond, which I won with the king. I played a club to the king. Giving up hope of establishing the club suit, as I wouldn't be able to clear hearts and retain entries to use the clubs even if they broke 3—3, I played the diamond queen. Silidor played the heart seven, and rather than give up my heart honors (it now looked as if the whole hand was bad), I tossed a spade.

"Silidor played a small heart, I put on the jack, Becker the king, the board the ace. I now took another spade chuck on the club ace; played another club and ruffed with a small heart; played the spade ace and tossed the last diamond from dummy; ruffed a spade and played the now set-up clubs. Silidor trumped with the heart ten, I overruffed with the queen and ruffed another spade.

"I ended up in dummy with good clubs. Silidor, on my right, had the nine and five of hearts and I had the heart six over him and a worthless spade. If he trumps the club lead with the nine, my heart six is good. Actually, he played the heart five; my six won, and he trumped my worthless spade with the heart nine."

Churchill made his contract of four hearts, losing a diamond and two heart tricks.

It's About Time

By Dolores Beland

IT'S ABOUT TIME to consider dark felt for over-draperies which serve as blackout curtains. Easy to make because a lining and interlining are not needed. Edge these with a wide pastel cotton fringe, if you want a really smart window decor

Rationing Made Easy

How will point rationing of canned goods affect people who eat in restaurants and boarding houses?

According to a recent OPA release, patrons of restaurants and similar institutions will not be required to surrender ration stamps in order to be served food during the initial ration period. However, a plan has been set up to allocate processed foods, as well as sugar and coffee, to restaurants in proportion to the number of persons they serve. A record of meals served has been kept by each restaurant operator since December 1, 1942. The allowance per person will correspond as nearly as possible with the allowance given those who eat at home.

Under this plan, restaurant and boarding house operators must stretch their allowances in much the same way that the housewife stretches hers.

Household Hints

Use water softener in your washing machine. It will save you soap and you'll get better cleaning results.

Save your woolens by not leaving them in the washing machine longer than three minutes. Mild soap should be used and a lukewarm rinsing water.

Remember that rayons are weak when wet and are apt to stretch out of shape or to fray; therefore extra care should be taken in laundering.

Always iron curtains lengthwise and on the wrong side. To get the hemline straight, first press along the bottom of the curtain.

Sweet milk may be made sour by adding two tablespoons of vinegar to each of milk. Allow this to stand in a warm place until it thickens.

That Wild Arnold Girl

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

THE STORY THUS FAR: Jenny Arnold is more or less the Cinderella of the Arnold family; imposed upon by her selfish older sister, Madeline, and her frivolous and indiscreet mother, Celia; and misunderstood by her father, James Arnold, of whom she is deeply fond. Cultivating a brassy, wise-cracking attitude is Jenny's automatic defense, but beneath that veneer she is still soft and desperately hungry for affection. Afraid of hurting her father, she doesn't tell him of her mother's most recent flirtation with the young dancing master, Tony Torrento, even though all of their friends are whispering about it. She realizes for the first time that she is capable of falling in love when she sees Madeline's new boy, Bill Winslow, and it is but meager comfort for her to tell herself he is a snob. She accepts Bill's invitation to go walking, when Madeline forgets her date with him.

CHAPTER XI

And suddenly her anger and resistance gave way to a recklessness that was half desire. She tried to sound indifferent as she said, "if you insist. At least Briar will love having you along."

He shrugged and winked at Mrs. Crick.

After all, Jenny reasoned, it wasn't as if they'd deliberately made a date in Madeline's absence. If she hadn't forgotten about her own date with him, he wouldn't even be here.

Jenny was wearing the same faded yellow sweater she'd worn the first time Bill had seen her, the one that seemed to turn her skin golden, and bring golden lights into the heavy shining mass of her brown hair. The old whipcord jodhpurs accented the trimness of her young body and its grace.

Bill, striding along beside her, couldn't help thinking how strange it was that Jenny Arnold could seem as sweet as she did this morning and yet be capable of such sullen defiance and wicked fire as he had seen in her twice before.

Briar, trotting along ahead of them, spotted a rabbit and went yelping and leaping through the tall meadow grasses in hot pursuit. Jenny's charm this morning was due to the feeling of happiness within her. Because she was never one for half-way measures. If she and Bill were to spend the morning together she might as well let herself go and really enjoy being with him.

Conversation

Her dark eyes were starry, her mouth a soft tremulous curve.

"I'll race you to the beech tree at the top of the hill!" she said gaily.

Bill's tall, rangy body, which indoors gave an impression of boyish awkwardness because of its bulk, was far more athletic and fleet than she had expected.

He had turned and was waiting when she came panting up to drop laughing at the foot of the beech tree.

"I'm afraid that wasn't exactly fair," Bill said as he sank down beside her. "I was a runner in college. It was my specialty, sort of."

Briar came back, panting, excited. He jumped all over them giving licks of his pink tongue indiscriminately. With protesting laughter they scrambled to their feet to escape his exuberance.

The path led through the woods now and already the smell of the river was in their nostrils. It was easy to talk of inconsequential things, how green the moss grew here among the trees, like velvet beneath their feet, how lovely the clouds were, banked in the blue sky above.

Bill told her about the sea and summers he'd spent sailing with his cousin at Cape Cod.

Jenny told him about a camping trip she'd taken with her father once at a lake in Michigan. Just she and her father together

It was as they came to the bank of the river and were walking along among the rocks that it happened.

Jenny's foot slipped and she started to fall. Bill's arms went around her. She was intensely conscious of their strength and tenderness.

She knew the walk was spoiled now. The lovely comradely ease that had fallen between them had vanished. Jenny was aware of Bill again only as a man with whom she was fascinated. She was suffocated by his nearness, his gray eyes, his strong mouth, the sweep of his dark hair, his strong hands.

He held her close for a surprised instant and she felt the steady, hard beat of his heart. And she didn't quite know how it happened, but all at once he was kissing her.

Jenny Is Kissed

Jenny had never been kissed in such a way before. Her knees turned weak and lightning danced along her veins. She forgot Madeline, she forgot all her resolutions about Bill. She forgot everything except Bill's lips against her own.

When he released her at last she was ashamed to find that her arms had been tight about his neck, her fingers tangled in his dark hair.

"Jenny," he whispered. His gray eyes were sober and intent, his face dark with emotion.

She wrested away. "That was silly, wasn't it?" she said lightly. She started on.

"But Jenny, I——

He caught up with her, touched her arm.

She turned angrily. She was more angry at herself than him. Why hadn't she listened to her own heart telling her not to come with him? She had known the danger.

Slayer of Girl Goes Eagerly To His Death

By the Associated Press

San Quentin, Calif., Jan. 22.—Impatient for death, Leslie Bela Gireth helped a guard strap him to the execution chair in San Quentin's gas chamber today and then eagerly breathed deeply as the fumes filled the room.

He died for the murder of Miss Dorena Hammer, 21. Those who talked to him in his last hours said he was positive he would be reunited with her at the moment of his death.

Thus ended "the carnation murder case." But the motive is still a mystery.

[The United Press reported that Gireth, before entering the chamber, said he wanted to keep his motive a secret until his two sons are of age. He has written letters, he said, explaining he was not a "cold-blooded murderer," which will be given to them when they are 21.—Editor's note.]

Gireth, 39, was a wealthy jeweler in Glendale, Calif. A native of Hungary, he was married and had two sons.

He developed an infatuation for Miss Hammer. Some believe he learned she was planning to marry another. Last July, in the motor court they occupied together in San Leandro, he fired three bullets into her body as she slept. He placed his photograph beside the bed, and arranged a tall vase of red carnations at the girl's side. Then he surrendered.

"People wouldn't understand," was all he would say of his motive. "It was the anniversary of our love. I was afraid our love would lead to a scandal that would ruin her life. As she slept I decided to kill her."

Gireth refused all legal counsel. He resented fretfully any move in his behalf for clemency. In letters to the court he insisted he be executed.

The man was playing "Ave Maria" on his portable phonograph as the warden went to conduct him to the gas chamber. It was one of 20 classical recordings which he had played throughout the night. Among them was "Claire de Lune," whose sad strains Miss Hammer listened to that evening before she died.

Polio-Stricken Diva Makes 'Comeback'

By John Selby

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 22.—Wagner may have written "Tannhauser," but he had little to do with its most poignant scene at tonight's performance at the Metropolitan Opera House. Marjorie Lawrence was the pivot and cause of that scene.

It was Miss Lawrence's first appearance in a regular opera performance since she was stricken with infantile paralysis in June, 1941, while singing in Mexico City. She was the Venus, almost the only important role she can sing at present, since it is not necessary for her to move from the golden couch throughout.

"It was fun," she said afterward. "I don't know whether you'd say I'm happy or not. It brings up memories.

"But I am grateful, believe me. And I wish it could have been Brunnhilde. The 'Walkure' Brunnhilde was the first role I ever sang at the Metropolitan, you know, back in 1935."

Miss Lawrence was taken to the stage in a collapsible wheelchair, took her place on the couch, and was photographed endlessly, surrounded by fellow artists, by Edward Ziegler, Edward Johnson, her husband, Thomas King—half the staff of the house.

She sang strongly through her scene with Lauritz Melchior, was roundly applauded and was wheeled back to her dressing room.

Ten-year-old Ellen McGurk and 5-year-old Gerry King, both of whom have been treated for paralysis by Sister Kenny, were there to greet her.

"You don't have to wear a brace at all, do you?" she asked Gerry. Gerry allowed he didn't.

"Well, I've still got one at home," Miss Lawrence added, and Gerry said "Gee!"

"It's such a short part, Venus," Miss Lawrence remarked as the crowd filed out of her dressing room. "I'd just got started when it was over.

"But I'll be back——"

Zorita Faces White Slave Accusation

ZORITA

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 22.—Zorita, night club dancer known as the Snake Charmer, and three other persons were under arrest today on charges of conspiracy to violate the White Slave Traffic Act.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation disclosed that its agents arrested the four on Wednesday night, and listed them as Ada Brockett, 25, better known as Zorita, former burlesque performer and snake dancer; Gwen Gibson, 23, of Thomasville, Ga.; Irving Alexander, 35, manager of night clubs, and Maurice Chernov, 44, a waiter.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter, Alexander and Chernov were held in bail of $1000 for hearing. The two women waived hearing and were held in bail of $500 each for grand jury action.

The FBI accused the four of inducing girls to come to New York, and of establishing them in an apartment where dates were arranged for them.

Donegan said Miss Brockett, a native of Youngstown, Ohio, started her career at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1933.

She had appeared with her snake act in night clubs and burlesque houses throughout the country, including Washington, he said, and once was arrested for causing a traffic jam in Miami Beach, Fla., by leading her pet snake on a leash through a crowd.

AFL Ratifies Arbitration Pact With CIO

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 22.—The American Federation of Labor's executive council ratified today a no-raiding agreement with the Congress of Industrial Organizations which A. F. L. President William Green described as the first formal step toward unifying the rival labor groups.

The C. I. O. already had ratified the treaty.

The agreement provides arbitration for jurisdictional disputes.

Executive council approval came after some A. F. L. leaders had accused the C. I. O. of breaking faith already by filing a complaint against A. F. L. closed-shop contracts signed by Henry J. Kaiser shipyards at Portland, Oreg.

Green said the council had instructed the peace committee, which drew up the agreement at meetings with C. I. O. representatives, to see to it that the "spirit and purpose" of the pact are carried out.

He added that it is possible that the Kaiser complaint, which led to a hearing now under way by the National Labor Relations Board, will be one of the first to come up under the agreement.

The pact provides that in cases of dispute, peace committees of the two unions may name an arbitrator. If they fail to agree on an umpire, then the president of the United States will be asked to name a representative to settle the differences.

"It is the policy of the American Federation of Labor," Green said, "to prevent and stop continual warfare between the two American labor organizations."

Today's ratification, Green explained, "is the first practical step that has yet been taken in an effort to compose the differences of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O."

Next, he said, the committees will take up the question of an amalgamation of the two organizations.

Young Model Plane Builder To Get His Gas

"Keep 'Em Flying" was the watchword of the OPA yesterday in ruling that Ronnie Ingraham, 14, of 208 Acacia Avenue, Bethesda, could continue to use his "E" ration book to get gasoline for his model airplane.

Ronnie, with other boys, has been working on model planes for pilot schools to help in training the older men to recognize Allied and enemy planes at a glance, an OPA spokesman said.

In addition, the youngsters are training themselves to become first-class mechanics and pilots.

The models need only one ounce to fill their tanks, and 5 gallons of gasoline will last one for 6 months.

"The building and operation of the models by our youths will make the difference between an American and an enemy pilot in the years to come," the OPA spokesman said.

Ronnie's mother, Mrs. Reginald Ingraham, said the lad had been building planes for the past five years and, while he had concentrated mostly on gliders, he has constructed three moto 1 planes, one of which he recently finished.

"He has a friend, an adult, in Takoma Park, "she said, "who designs the little planes and then lets the boys build them from the designs. He pays them by furnishing them the material for a plane of their own and takes the models they have built from his designs and offers them for sale."

She said Ronnie was working now on a model for the Pilot's School.

The model plane enthusiasts get a gas ration book in which each coupon is good for 1 gallon of fuel. They then use an oil can to fill the tiny tank. The small amount of gas used is considered well expended.

Meanwhile, the Navy Department announced it is asking school children to undertake to make 300,000 model planes, replicas of Allied and Axis machines, this year. They will be used to train fliers, gunners and spotters in the salient characteristics of friendly and enemy ships.

Thirty-five per cent of the planes will be used in training aviators and gunners and the remainder for other purposes.
